Top female role-models triumph at the Irish Women's Awards 2019

The inaugural Irish Women's Awards 2019 welcomed over 200 guests at the Crowne Plaza Dublin Blanchardstown Hotel, on Monday 21st of January in an exclusive celebration dedicated to women.

The awards ceremony aimed to showcase the contribution of women to various industries and professions such as Law, Medicine, Technology, Arts, Sport, Education and many more. The awards also provided a platform to thank and recognise meritorious ladies for their attributions to our society as well as for the exceptional work they carry out on a daily basis that often remain unknown or even un-appreciated.

The black-tie event was hosted by the Award Winning Radio Broadcaster, TV Producer and Author, Aideen Hand. She welcomed on stage inspirational leaders, scientists, artists, charity workers and many other women who have excelled at the forefront of their industries.

The competition was fierce but Professor Lorraine Brennan, University College Dublin was crowned winner in the Services to Science and Technology category and took the trophy home.

A Spokesperson for the Irish Women's Awards 2019, said: "We are delighted to have acknowledged successful women from across Ireland who have managed to stand out among the rest in their profession. It is a pleasure to see that empowered women, empower women and this memorable ceremony highlighted exactly that.

"We hope that The Irish Women's Awards provided a platform to encourage women at all ages to achieve their goals and spread the message that women can be successful leaders, entrepreneurs, influencers, scientists and CEOs among other.

"The awards showcased examples of courage, passion, skill, commitment and success that feature in women and we would like to congratulate all finalists and winners for their impeccable achievements."
