Research Masters programme structure

The core of the Research Masters degree award is a coherent programme of research which requires that the student successfully completes Masters-level research, the principal outcome of which is a submitted thesis in acceptable form and deemed to be of satisfactory standard. The degree requires a minimum of one year full-time (or equivalent part-time) research.

The Research Masters degree programme may also include additional personal and professional development elements which develop the skills and competencies required for successful research and/or support the acquisition of generic or transferable skills. This may be provided via specific modules from the advanced educational programme of the University which are herein listed.
