Welcome to a new programme and several new initiatives for this academic year. You can now register online using our new booking facility on www.ucd.ie/adulted.

We have new Open Learning courses. These Open Learning courses are part of a long tradition in UCD, and follow the legacy of the university’s founder Cardinal John Henry Newman, who wished to make higher level education accessible to a broad sweep of Irish people.

Today, UCD remains committed to widening participation in higher education, in all its forms, whether to accredited formal learning programmes or informal open learning provision. As part of the Access and Lifelong Learning unit we are collaborating with colleagues across campus to extend opportunities to all. We believe the rich intellectual resources of the university should be available to all. A new aspect of this commitment involves a new project on flexible learning which offers you an opportunity to sample a semester or two of Archaeology at degree level.

This year our colleagues in Science will open a remarkable new building. They will host our Open Learning programmes in their new facility and we welcome this development as it will facilitate a community of lifelong learners on the Belfield campus.

In addition to the new initiatives we are also proud of one of our oldest offerings – mature years’ access courses. We have a unique and well-established record in Access for Mature Students. We offer Access to Arts and Human Sciences and Access to Science and Engineering Courses, all specifically designed for adults who may never before have had the opportunity to study at third level. The courses prepare learners who aim to take higher education options on completion. We also continue to offer our Certificate in Genealogy/Family History. Whatever your motivation we hope you join us in lifelong learning at UCD. We look forward to meeting you!

FLEXIBLE LEARNING
TASTE ARCHAEOLOGY AT THIRD LEVEL

UCD is offering a new Flexible learning option to those of you who wish to sample degree-level modules in Archaeology. The School of Archaeology warmly invites adult learners to register for and join in First Year modules.

The modules available are Exploring Archaeology in Semester 1 and Introducing the Archaeology of Ireland in Semester 2. You may opt to take one or both. Your registration will include a UCD Student Card and access to UCD’s James Joyce Library. You can opt to take the module for interest alone, and attend lectures only, or you can deepen your learning by participating in and completing all course assessments.
Exploring Archaeology
(ARCH10010)
Module Coordinator:
Professor Gabriel Cooney

SEMESTER 1
Archaeology explores how people in the past - and sometimes the present - used places, objects and animals to create and inhabit worlds that were often very different from our own. In this sense, archaeology provides us with unique insights into the human condition and a sense of what it is to be a person in many different cultural contexts. This module will give you a general introduction to this exciting and engaging subject, enabling you to understand basic archaeological principles, methods and techniques. We will look at the history and development of archaeological thought. We will explore how archaeologists discover, survey and excavate places from the past and we will trace how we can interpret past societies from the objects (material culture) that they created, used and discarded. The module is taught by 12 lively, well-illustrated lectures, 1 class archaeological fieldtrip to a prehistoric landscape and 1 class visit to a museum, all providing you with practical opportunities to investigate ancient landscapes and objects yourself.

Introducing the Archaeology of Ireland
(ARCH10050)
Module Coordinator:
Professor Muiris O Suilleabhain

SEMESTER 2
This module tells the human story in Ireland from the Stone Age to the present, beginning with the earliest inhabitants around 10,000 years ago. It reveals the footprint of people through time by means of the spectacular archaeological heritage of the country. Ancient monuments, landscapes and objects are explored in order to understand the lifestyles of early inhabitants, the achievements and beliefs of megalith builders, the major innovations in ancient Ireland such as farming, metal-working and Christianity, the origins of Celtic Ireland, and above all the emergence of the Irish landscape as we know it today. The module is organized as follows: (a) One lecture each week presenting the story of Ireland from the Mesolithic to the present; (b) occasional special case studies in a second lecture slot each week; (c) tutorials to complement and reinforce the lectures; and (d) directed visits to the National Museum of Ireland and Ferrycarrig Heritage Park.

Q. How many credits for these courses
A. Each course carries 5 ECTS

Q. What is an ECTS?
A. ECTS refers to the European Credit Transfer System and provides a common currency for representing academic activity throughout Europe. It is used to facilitate student mobility and transferability of degrees and awards. ECTS is linked to the Bologna Process and EU Tuning Project. Further details are available at http://www.bologna.ie. Credits are awarded on the basis of attendance, student effort and satisfactory completion of associated coursework and satisfaction of the relevant learning outcomes.

Q. What is Audit Only?
A. Either of these Archaeology modules can also be studied purely for interest without undertaking the assessment component of a course. This is known as auditing a module. If you are uncertain whether you want to be assessed you are welcome to begin the module on an audit basis and switch later (within the first three teaching weeks) by paying the additional fee (€235).

Q. How will I be assessed?
A. There will be three different assessments used for both modules. Your participation in tutorials will be 10% of your grade. You will do a one hour Multiple Choice Examination at the end of the semester for 50% of your grade and you will complete a project based on an archaeological fieldtrip and museum visit which will be 40% of the total grade. You will have an experienced and dedicated tutor to support you.

Q. How do I register?
A. Contact the Adult Education Centre and you can register over the phone on 716 7123 or call in to the centre. Alternatively you can download an application form from www.ucd.ie/adulted/flexiblelearning

Q. Will I get a Library Card?
A. Yes, Student Cards will be issued following registration on the course.

Q. When are tutorials?
A. Your tutor Dr Maureen Doyle will take the tutorial on the same day as your lecture. Further details will be given at registration.

Q. Will I be the oldest?
A. No – Our programmes encourage participation across a diverse age group.
Q. How do these Modules differ from Open Learning Adult Education courses?
A. Flexible Learning Modules allow you the option to sample degree level subjects; whereas Open Learning courses are taken to further an interest in particular areas and do not carry accreditation.

Q. What’s next?
A. We aim to offer additional modules for students in the following academic years. You will be advised about our future plans while you are studying with us.

Q. What is (Recognition of Prior Learning) RPL?
A. RPL is defined as: “the process by which prior learning is given a value. It is a means by which prior learning is formally identified, assessed and acknowledged”.

Q. Do I get exemptions if I go on for further study?
A. Each module carries 5 ECTS and may be submitted by you as part of an RPL application.

Q. Are there concessions in fees?
A. Concessions are not available on the either of these Module fees.

Q. Can I park in UCD?
A. Yes, there are a number of car parks available –Please note that some Pay and Display car parks operate on the campus.

Q. Where do I go if I have a problem?
A. You can contact the Adult Education Centre 01.7167123 and you will also receive academic support from your dedicated subject tutor.
ACCESS COURSES
ACCESS all areas! Have you ever thought of coming to college?

UCD welcomes mature learners and is delighted to provide a variety of courses to get you started. The Adult Education Centre is a leader in the field of lifelong learning and in supporting mature students in their preparation for university.

We offer Access to Arts & Human Sciences and Access to Science & Engineering courses to equip mature students with the skills and confidence required to take the next step to a Third Level course in UCD.

Access to Arts and Human Sciences

Certificate in Foundation Level Studies – Level 6
This course is designed to prepare adults, who may not have formal qualifications, for successful study at university. The course is suitable for those who aim to study in the area of the Arts, Human Sciences or Law.

This course guarantees entry to the following:
• Bachelor of Arts*
• Bachelor of Civil Law
• Bachelor of Social Science
*(DN600 - see UCD Mature and Graduate Entry Pathways 2014 booklet for details)

Students who have completed the course are guaranteed an offer of a place on the following conditions:
• Obtain an average mark in excess of 60% in the overall course assessment
• Are eligible to apply on grounds of mature years
• Follow appropriate application procedures via the CAO

The course aims to:
• Equip students with the skills that they will need to engage in an undergraduate course
• Introduce students to the methods of study, writing and research required for successful participation in higher education
• Prepare students to compete for entry to third level and to make informed choices about further study
• Increase students’ self-confidence in their ability to advance within third level education
• Offer students the opportunity to experience the fulfilment that can be gained from learning in an academic setting

Access from this course to further study at UCD is guaranteed to students who meet established assessment criteria, are eligible to apply on grounds of mature years and who follow appropriate application procedures via the CAO.

From age 22 to 102!
Anyone aged 22 or more on 1st of January 2013 may apply for an Access course to start in September 2013. For entry to third level programmes applicants must be at least 23 on 1st of January of the proposed year of entry. There is no upper age limit.

ENTRY REQUIREMENTS
There are no formal educational entry requirements. Applicants may apply using prior educational qualifications or life experience. Evidence of recent prior learning is most relevant in an application. Adult learners are invited to submit their life experience and individual strengths as evidence of their suitability. Candidates are required to complete an application form. They may then be invited to attend an interview and be assessed on a sample of written work. Interviews are typically scheduled during July and August by arrangement.
All applicants must be over the age of 22 on 1st January 2013.
Fee €850

Students who are registered as unemployed and/or in-receipt of one of the following payments: Job-seekers Benefit, Job-seekers Allowance or One-Parent Family Allowance may qualify for UCD Adult Education Access Programme 2013 – 14 Fees Scholarship Programme. It will be necessary to produce evidence of income. Thomond Coogan will be happy to discuss this with you and you may contact her on 01-7167584 or e-mail Thomond.Coogan@ucd.ie

WHAT IS OPEN LEARNING?
Open Learning courses cover a range of topics from Art History through to History, Literature, Philosophy and Writing. The courses are open to all and provide a chance to explore a subject without concerns focus on assessment. For the 2013-2014 academic year, there are many new courses, unique to University College Dublin (UCD) Adult Education.

We hope you find a course that suits your interests!

YOUR TUTORS
UCD Adult Education is privileged to work with a highly expert and committed group of tutors who are recruited not just on the basis of their subject expertise, but also for their demonstrated interest in adult learning.

You can read about your tutor’s qualifications and areas of expertise online where we have included a short tutor biography alongside the course information.

TUTOR BIOGRAPHIES ONLINE

READING AND BOOKLISTS
Booklists are available online alongside course descriptions. For the majority of courses, the booklist contains suggested reading for those interested in investigating the subject further. Your tutor can guide you as to which reading might be most suitable.

Booklists for literature students are more critical as classes are based on particular set texts. We recommend that initially you acquire just the first text listed as the list will be discussed with your tutor in class.

Bejewelled – The History of Jewellery from the 18th Century to the Present Day

AUTUMN AE-AN140
Moya Corcoran

This will be a fun and informative course that will look at the history and development of Western jewellery from the 18th century to the present day. It will include a field trip to The National Museum. You will immerse yourself in different decades and learn how the visual arts influenced each other and how cultural events, technology and economic circumstances impacted and determined jewellery design. We will discuss what makes a successful piece of jewellery and work together on ideas for creating a unique piece of jewellery that will reflect each student’s individual style. You will be encouraged to fully participate in each lecture and hopefully my passion for jewellery will inspire you to learn about the subject and begin to see inspiration for jewellery all around you.

Lockout 1913

AUTUMN AE-AN158
Síle McNulty-Goodwin, Education & Research Curator, Dublin City Gallery The Hugh Lane

Taking the exhibition Lockout 1913 as a starting point, this lecture series will examine significant artistic, social and political movements in Ireland during this period. 1913 was a complex and controversial year in both the history of Ireland and in the establishment of the Hugh Lane Gallery. This course will take place in the Hugh Lane Gallery itself, making for a unique and poignant venue to tell the visual story of this turbulent time.

Irish Painting: An Introduction
AUTUMN AE-AN160
Jessica Fahy

This survey course will provide an introduction to paintings produced by Irish artists at home and abroad up to and including the twentieth century. It will examine the notion of “Irishness” in these works. This will include an examination of the place of Irish art in Ireland’s history and how it can be seen as a reflection of the changing social, political, religious and economic influences. An essential element of this course will be two visits to the National Gallery of Ireland and one to the Hugh Lane Gallery.

Venice: Art and Myth
AUTUMN AE-AN134
Philip Cottrell

This course acts as an introduction to the dazzling art and culture of Renaissance Venice, with a particular focus on painting. In discussing the works of leading artists such as Giovanni Bellini, Titian, and Tintoretto, as well as the contribution of architects such as Andrea Palladio, we shall examine a period in which many of the myths and traditions of Venice were simultaneously challenged and renewed. Overall, the course pursues a thematic approach that seeks to bind the art discussed to the unique identity and character of the fabulous city in which it was created.

Whether in work, community or home situations, people need to be more comfortable in managing everyday disputes. This module helps you understand the positive value of conflict and its predictable dynamics. You will discover more about your preferred style of handling conflict and how to harness other styles. Through interactive discussion and role-play, you will learn practical skills for reflective listening, being assertive, negotiating and problem solving. You will be better able to handle hot emotion and to shift stubborn positions. A further course on Mediation Skills is offered in Spring 2014.

Introductory Applied Economics
AUTUMN AE-BN111
Joe Durkan

This course introduces participants to some basic economic concepts and uses them to illustrate the economic aspect of many policy issues of the day. The course addresses the big-picture questions (macro) but it also considers the more detailed questions (micro) that matter. Thus we look at what makes an economy grow in a macro sense and also look at the micro policies that make it possible. Throughout, examples will be used to illustrate the points.

Irish Drama from 1980 to Today: An Introduction
AUTUMN AE-DN107
Susanne Colleary

This course will critique, explore and interrogate both text and performance as a means of gaining deeper insight into the content and the craft of theatre making in Ireland. Students will be invited to take a tour both of the Abbey Theatre and the Project Arts Centre in order to understand their respective ethos’ and practice as two of Ireland’s most established and influential artistic institutions. These tours will form the backbone of this survey course of Irish Theatre and Performance, beginning in 1980 and continuing until the present day. Students will be introduced to playwrights such as Brian Friel, Tom Murphy, Frank McGuinness, Marina Carr and Siofra Campbell, among others.

Ireland’s Rivers and Lakes Revealed!

AUTUMN AE-HN179

Ken Whelan

The island of Ireland possesses an aquatic heritage which is unique in Europe. Packed into a land area of just 84,000 km² is a vast array of loughs, rivers and streams. Participants will learn how our rivers and lakes were forged from a mixture of fire and ice; how aquatic life first appeared and how by genetic selection and diversification life thrived in these systems. It will describe our water resources as a source of energy and as pathways for transportation. Strategies will be discussed to ensure the sustainability of our unquenchable thirst for greater and greater volumes of this unique and fast disappearing native treasure.

Irish Birds

AUTUMN AE-HN105

Richard Collins

Ireland is rich in birds and this course will help you identify them through ten talks (with slides and recordings of birdsong) and half-day field outings (at weekends) to the best bird-watching haunts near Dublin. We examine how birds live, feed, breed and migrate, their psychology, society, behaviour, history and folklore. The approach is informal and relaxed. No previous knowledge is required.

The Classic Era of Hollywood Cinema 1910-1960

AUTUMN AE-FN116

Eric Egan

This course will examine the Hollywood dream factory throughout the studio heyday. Tracing its transformation from carnival side to world domination in the 1920s, through the height of the classical era in the 1930s and ‘40s, to the post-war decline, the breakup of the studio system and the transformation of the industry in the 1950s, we will seek to locate American cinema in a wider social, political and cultural context. The course will examine its mode of production, principle stylistic and narrative trends, significant films, filmmakers and stars along with some rarities, overlooked works in need of reappraisal, and filmic oddities.

GENEALOGY

Introduction to Genealogy/Family History

AUTUMN AE-GN102

Sean Murphy

This course aims to provide students with basic guidance in tracing ancestors and learning more about our families in the past. A range of records will be examined, many of them now conveniently searchable online, including census, birth, marriage and death and valuation records, church registers, wills, memorial inscriptions, newspapers and directories. Participants will be encouraged to compile a portfolio of copy records and notes to share with their families and to compare findings with fellow students.

The Kennedys: An Irish American Political Dynasty

AUTUMN AE-HN184
Sarah Feehan

This course is a study of the Kennedy family and their role in late nineteenth and twentieth century America. Taking a chronological approach it will trace the establishment of what has become known as a great Irish American political dynasty. It will begin by looking at the two political figures, John Francis Fitzgerald and Patrick Joseph Kennedy, who made the breakthrough that sets the foundation for the dynasty. It will then move forward to consider the achievements of John F. Kennedy, Robert Kennedy and Edward Kennedy. While considering many figures in this dynasty the course will dedicate almost half of its classes to John F. Kennedy who epitomised the dynasty in the twentieth century.

AUTUMN AE-HN187
Richard McElligott

This ten week lecture series explores the varied and often strained relationship between Ireland and Great Britain in the modern era. It offers a wide overview of Anglo-Irish relations from the 1798 Rebellion and subsequent Act of Union of 1801 to the signing of the Good Friday Agreement in 1998. The course helps participants to understand the origins and development of constitutional relations between Britain and Ireland and the powerful personalities who helped shape it. Additionally, it examines the impact that the ‘Troubles’ in Northern Ireland and the subsequent Peace Process had on the nature of Anglo-Irish relations.

Europe 1919-1939: Democracy and Dictatorship between the Wars

AUTUMN AE-HN182
Michael Doran

After the trauma of World War One, the post-war hopes of many Europeans were challenged by economic hardship and political uncertainty. This course will examine and discuss the main developments that occurred in Europe during the inter-war period. This will include the failure of democracy and the rise of political extremism. The course will try to explain why much of Europe would be ruled by dictatorships and authoritarian regimes. The focus will be on events in the main European countries and also on the leading personalities of the period, e.g., Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin. It was because of these political changes that Europe would, in 1939, enter the catastrophe of World War Two.

The History of Ireland:
From Plantations to Partition
(c. 1500-c. 1922)

AUTUMN AE-HN180
John Cronin

This course will address all the major events of Irish history from the beginning of the Tudor conquest in 1534 to the creation of the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland in 1921/22. The first half of the term will focus on the early modern period, from c. 1500 AD to the penal era of the 18th century. We will then look at developments in Irish nationalism, starting with the 1798 Rebellion to the 1916 Rising. Finally, we will look at the creation of the Irish Free State, later the Republic of Ireland, and Northern Ireland.

A History of Dublin through Walks and Talks
AUTUMN AE-HN115
Áinnle O’Neill

This course highlights Dublin as an historical city, whose many highways, byways, large buildings, houses, etc., help to tell the story of how Dublin grew from a small trading post in the 9th century, to become the second city of the British Empire in the 19th. The talks present the background historical details, which are fleshed out and placed in context during the relevant walks.

Globalisation and Development

AUTUMN AE-TN112

Andy Storey and Vincent Durac

This course is designed to introduce students to key themes in global politics and development. The phenomenon of ‘globalisation’ can be defined as the increasing interconnectedness of countries, as manifested through closer trade, investment and other economic ties. It is also evident through the claimed emergence of a common global culture. These definitions and claims will be examined during the course, as will the possible ‘downsides’ of globalisation, including the intensification of climate change. Finally, the challenges of governing a more globalised world economy will be addressed.

AUTUMN AE-PN111

Fidelma Farley

While many of us want to live and experience our lives in a meaningful way, we find it hard to slow down, to take the time to look below the surface busyness of our lives to find who we really are and what we really want and value. These two workshops will introduce you to Mindfulness, which provides a set of skills and helpful techniques that enable us to become more aware of ourselves and our experience. By developing this awareness in a non-judgemental way, we enhance our quality of life, and our ability to care for ourselves.

Home and Away: Exile in Irish Writing

AUTUMN AE-LN174

Alan Graham

Displacement and the yearning for home has long been a feature of Irish literature. Engaging with prose, drama and poetry, this course will explore the theme of exile in twentieth-century Irish writing. Different forms and understandings of exile will be charted in selected texts, including the plight of the Irish emigrant, the ‘culchie’ in Dublin and the marginalisation of women in Irish society. A particular focus will be the experience of Protestants in independent Ireland. Lectures take place in the National Library.

Writing Ireland

AUTUMN AE-LN179

Garrett Fagan

This course provides an introduction and grounding in important Irish writers from Yeats and Joyce to Heaney and Roddy Doyle. Students will encounter writers from the nineteenth and early twentieth century right up the present day. Students will be given a grounding in how to read novels, poems and plays at a deeper level than the casual reader and will be invited to examine how Irish writing deals with social and historical issues in defining Ireland and Irishness. No prior knowledge or skills are required for this course beyond and enjoyment of reading and an interest in Ireland and its culture and history.

Modern Literature and the City
AUTUMN AE-LN181
Tutor to be confirmed

The city is the defining feature of modern life. During the past two centuries it has increasingly come to define the way that people interact, and communities are formed. This course will examine how writers from diverse backgrounds have depicted urban experience since the nineteenth century, and seek to understand how the city has changed the way texts are both written and read. Just as the city has changed modern life, this course will consider how it has changed modern literature.

The Human Condition: Czech Writers and the World
AUTUMN AE-LN173
Jana Fischerova

The aim of this course is to explore the connections that exist between certain major Czech writers and some famous writers of other literatures. Our consideration of these specific links – between Arnošt Lustig and Primo Levi, Josef Škvorecký and Ernest Hemingway, Zdeněk Jirotka and P.G. Wodehouse, Václav Havel and Tom Stoppard and Samuel Beckett – will serve as a basis for a more general discussion about the role and power of literature. We will look at how ideas concerning the human condition transcend national and other boundaries, and address the question of what makes a work of literature universally valid.

We are living in a volatile world that overwhelms our capacities to make sense of it and of our own precarious existence. It is here that classic modernist fiction can provide psychological mirroring and inspiration. This course thus focuses on how key European novelists - Kafka, Proust, Thomas Mann, Camus - can help us with our struggles: to create values, meaning and a coherent self. Our approach - a master-class in active reading - will deepen literary interpretation into personal exploration. We will develop the positive potentials - dreams, visions, moments of intensity and wholeness - to be found in these texts and, not least, in ourselves.

Sound Advice: Enjoying Classical Music

AUTUMN AE-MN108
Michelle Sluuds Hickey

This course offers a guide to enjoying Classical Music, an approach to perceptive listening and an introduction to musical elements, form and stylistic periods from chant to Chopin to Copland. It assumes little or no musical background and is for those who would like to broaden their musical horizons in a friendly atmosphere. The course includes interactive discussions of composers’ lives and their works. We will examine musical characteristics from medieval, baroque, classical, romantic, impressionistic and 20th century eras. We will listen to how music communicates to us and the relationship between composer, performer and listener. Through participation in class, the basics of music ingredients and notation will be explained, with practical exercises in rhythm, melody and listening. Bring a sense of humour, pencil and paper and be prepared to sing and clap! The course includes 2 visits to live concerts (Tickets not included).

PHILOSOPHY

Moral Dilemmas

AUTUMN AE-QN131
Sandra Bonetto

Moral or ethical dilemmas have been a problem for moral theorists as far back as Plato. A moral dilemma is a complex situation that involves a conflict between moral imperatives, in which to obey one would result in transgressing another. Students will be exposed to several key ethical theories and a number of ethical dilemmas. They will be asked to discuss and debate these in class. The main aim of the course is to introduce students to ethics and for them to gain an understanding of the complexities involved in making moral decisions.

Logic and Reasoning

AUTUMN AE-QN140

Angelo Bottone

When judgements are confused, or not thought through, reason can help. The aim of this course is to introduce students to the basic ideas of logic and correct reasoning. They will learn how to analyse ordinary language statements and translate them into logical forms. Students will become familiar with the rules of good argument. They will be made aware of some of the ways in which reasoning can fail in order to recognise popular mistakes in themselves or in others. Examples from everyday arguments and common controversies will be discussed in class. Concepts such as formal reasoning, inference, deduction, induction, syllogism, validity, truth and falsity will be considered. Symbols and technicalities will be kept to a minimum. No previous knowledge is required.

Just Be There: One Essential Thing We Can Do

AUTUMN AE-QN132

Phil Huston

Sometimes the most important or only thing we can do for other people is to ‘be there’ for them. What do we mean by ‘being there’? How can we be present in a meaningful way? How am I when I am being present? What happens between me and the other person? When I am not really present, what impact does my absence have on the other person and on myself. These are some of the questions we will address together on this course with the assistance of Martin Buber’s classic text I and Thou.

Searching for the Self: Is There Such A Thing? A Philosophical Investigation Part 1
AUTUMN AE-QN134
Paddy Quinn

There is a general belief that there is a “self” e.g. an “I”, “myself”, “yourself” “ourselves” etc. Yet some philosophers, like David Hume, have disputed this claim. The course will examine the question through the views of such philosophers, as Hume’s own response to Descartes. Others who addressed the topic include St. Augustine, Plotinus, Ludwig Wittgenstein, Mary Warnock and Mary Midgley, the poet John Clare and P.H. Pearse’s autobiographical notes with contributions from Bernard Williams and Hywel D. Lewis. The concept of the self is also connected with the notion of person, a further issue to be discussed. No previous knowledge of philosophy is required. Course participants are encouraged to contribute to class discussions and relevant handouts will be given.

With the human population standing at 7 billion the challenge of feeding so many has never been greater. Despite huge progress in the past century, global warming, loss of biodiversity and the imminence of peak oil endanger agriculture. In the Third World malnutrition and even starvation continue, yet we confront a global obesity epidemic driven by over-consumption, as well other diet-related health problems. This course will examine the state and corporate actors that control the global production and supply of food. We will also explore the important cultural role that food plays in forging bonds between families, communities and nations. A trip to Dublin Urban Farm will be arranged.

Effective Stress Management for Modern Living
AUTUMN AE-PN127
Martin Kelly

As the philosopher Lao Tse once said: the biggest problem in the world could have been solved when it was small. This practical course will help you apply a comprehensive and dynamic approach to managing the stress of modern daily life, both at home and in your place of work. Drawing from an overview of the nature of acute and chronic stress, you will be shown how to create your own personal stress management system. This will enable you to identify the sources and symptoms of stress in your life and deal with them effectively. Throughout the course, all key ideas and strategies will be grounded in the learning and practice of relevant exercises, and you will be guided in the use of excellent psychological techniques such as anchoring, progressive relaxation and creative visualisation.

Knowledge and research in sport and exercise science has increased tremendously in the last 20 years. New training and teaching principles are currently being used to develop more effective and interactive training programmes for children, general populations and athletes. This course will provide an overview of the physiological background in sport and exercise and the applications of those principles in real settings such as fitness classes for wellbeing or training programmes for performance. Particular attention will be given to training principles and ideas that can be simply and immediately applied without the need to be part of a state-of-the-art sport facility.

The course will aim to bridge the gap between science and practice in sport and health providing simple scientific background and practical examples. Discussion is encouraged and no previous knowledge of the topic is required.
Creative Step: Creative Writing for Beginners

AUTUMN AE-WN106
Mark Granier

To write creatively is to think creatively, and thinking creatively can help us make sense of our lives. Sometimes all it takes is one small but decisive step. This course is designed to help people take that step; people who are keen to begin writing but remain intimidated by the blank page. Rather than critiquing students’ older work, emphasis will be on producing something new: crafting effective and imaginative sentences, learning how to be attentive to words and finding ways to surprise readers (including ourselves). As one former student put it, ‘the variety of literary forms really helped to stretch me and brought out different people’s strengths.’ A selection of short stories, flash fiction, poems and various ice-breaking and triggering exercises will offer ways for exploring language and distilling experience. Group discussion will play an important part in these classes.

This course offers an introduction to the startling and dramatic work of the Italian painter Caravaggio (1571-1610) by placing him within the context of his followers and rivals. In constructing an anatomy of the stylistic movement of Caravaggism which his art inspired, we shall focus on such topics as the portrayal of homoerotic and violent subject matter, the development of low-life genre scenes, and Caravaggism’s characteristic response to light. The course also investigates Caravaggio’s leading Baroque contemporaries, including the Carracci, Rembrandt and Rubens. The course culminates in a field trip to the National Gallery of Ireland.

Building on the skills gained in Module 1, you will practice third party mediation skills through five role plays in neighbour, workplace and intact family disputes. Problems in “getting parties to the table” and the five phases of a generic mediation process are introduced. You will learn how to suspend judgement, stay neutral, use a number of empowerment strategies as well as techniques of power balancing and reframing. Completion of Modules 1 and 2 and a further 20 hours in April/May 2013 allow participants to obtain accreditation from the Mediators Institute of Ireland leading to a Certificate of Practice.

Contemporary Irish Theatre in Focus

SPRING AE-DN206

Emma Creedon

This course will focus on the contemporary Irish theatrical scene. At the beginning of this course, students will be brought on a private backstage tour of The Gaiety Theatre. This “backstage pass” is the foundation point for developing an understanding of how a play is actually staged, before a study of contemporary Irish playwrights ensues. We will explore how Ireland’s theatre practitioners are approaching both canonical dramatic texts and devising new applied theatrical performances. Critiquing a mix of theory and practice is essential for exploring the rich tradition of producing drama in Ireland. Developing from this, seminars will feature close readings of specific plays by contemporary Irish playwrights such as Tom Murphy, Mark O’Rowe, Marina Carr and Frank McGuinness.

The Economics of the Current Great Recession

SPRING AE-BN210

Joe Durkan

The current economic and financial crisis facing the developed world is the most serious since the Great Depression of the 1930’s. This course sets out to examine the causes of the recession and how different regions - the US, UK, Eurozone - responded to it. A by-product of the recession has been major turmoil in the Eurozone and the course shows how the poor design of the Eurozone led to pressure on national governments once the recession resulted in different emerging budget deficits across the Eurozone. The particular problems in Ireland, with the emergence of the property and housing bubble, and their ultimate collapse, are explained, as are the consequences for the society of the fall in output, the rise in unemployment, and the banking crisis. The course then looks at possible solutions to the crisis, showing how little room for manoeuvre national governments in the Eurozone have, but how collective action could ease the situation.

Motorcycles, Monsters & Megalomania – New Hollywood in the 1970s

SPRING AE-FN215

Eric Egan

The 1970s was a decade of profound and far reaching change in American cinema. The breakdown of the studio system unleashed a wave of uncertainty and opportunity that gave birth to towering infernos, killer sharks and intergalactic battles in galaxies far far away, as well as some of the most iconic and groundbreaking films in American film history. Films such as Chinatown, Taxi Driver and Klute created an American Art Cinema of loneliness, fear, angst and paranoia. This course sets out to look at these changes and examine the films that emerged during this most fertile of filmic periods.

A History of Irish Food

SPRING AE-HN256

Frank Armstrong

Until recent times Irish attitudes to food have tended to be characterised by indifference to its finer points. This is perhaps a legacy of painful famine and stoic Catholicism. We will trace the origins of agriculture in this country, and identify how the process of colonisation radically changed the native diet, particularly through the introduction of the potato and the integration of Ireland into the British imperial economy. We will explore how varieties of ‘traditional’ Irish food came into being, and examine the culture that emerged, especially in the wake of the Celtic Tiger. We will chart the future direction of this fundamental life source. A trip to the Museum of National History will be arranged.

This course will focus on the history of the Vietnam War from an American perspective. It will examine the major events in the conflict and consider how these events have been portrayed on film. It will also analyse the soldier’s experience in Vietnam, the anti-war movement and the life of the returning veteran. The course aims to give a comprehensive understanding of the history of the Vietnam War while comparing and contrasting the history with the popular understanding of the conflict which has been propagated by the more than 400 films relating to the subject. The course does not presuppose knowledge of either the conflict or the films relating to it.

Hidden Dublin: From the Monto to Little Jerusalem

SPRING AE-HN267
Donal Fallon

This course will provide people with an insight into the social history of the Irish capital in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. By combining classroom lectures with walking tours, the course aims to shine a light on the lives of ordinary Dublin citizens historically, looking at issues like housing, class, culture, politics and more. Irish history has traditionally focused on famous male characters, yet this course aims to explore the lives of the forgotten and marginalised, including women and children. The class will introduce people to some of the more unsavoury aspects of Dublin’s past, while also celebrating the rich history of the city.

Modernity and Revolution in Europe (1871-1968)

SPRING AE-HN288

Eamonn McGrattan

How important was the revolutionary tradition to the construction of modern democratic politics and society? What was the relationship between popular upheaval and revolutionary terror? Does the revolutionary tradition hold any relevance in 21st Century Europe? Beginning in the nineteenth century Paris of Louise Michel, the ‘Red Virgin of Montmartre’, and climaxing with the upheavals of 1968, this course will provide a broad introduction to the dramatic, and often violent, history of radical popular revolt in modern Europe. Emphasis will be placed on the voices of the men and women who participated in these revolutionary events and on interrogating the meaning and legacy of the revolutionary tradition that inspired and haunted European society throughout the course of these hundred years. The course will be taught using a variety of historical media including movies, novels, poems and the occasional history book. A walking tour of revolutionary Dublin will also be held on the morning of Saturday, 1st March.

Modern Literature and the City

SPRING AE-LN281
Tutor to be Confirmed

The city is the defining feature of modern life. During the past two centuries it has increasingly come to define the way that people interact, and communities are formed. This course will examine how writers from diverse backgrounds have depicted urban experience since the nineteenth century, and seek to understand how the city has changed the way texts are both written and read. Just as the city has changed modern life, this course will consider how it has changed modern literature. This eight week course will look at different texts than the Autumn course, and is open to both new and continuing students.

Contemporary Comedy Fiction
SPRING AE-LN278
Louise Walsh

When Milan Kundera said “that the art of the novel came into the world as an echo of God’s laughter,” he struck at the knife’s edge on which comedy fiction is often balanced; veering at times dangerously close to farce, and, at others comically towards what is dangerous to think or say. Comedy fiction has a long history of laughing in the face of what we consider ‘appropriate’ and has maintained a delightfully inappropriately relationship with scathing social critique, parody and satire. From ‘black’ and ‘blue’, to ‘picaresque’ and ‘comedy-of-manners’, writing ‘funny’ can be a very serious business indeed. Looking at canonical comedy writers such as Spike Milligan, Flann O’Brien, Philip Roth and Joseph Heller, this course will consider the seriously funny implications of comedy fiction, how it is deployed and why. It’s time we got serious about having fun.

The Novel as Spiritual Journey
SPRING AE-LN277
Peter Labanyi

This course is motivated by the belief that literature has the power not just to inspire and nourish but also psychologically to transform us. We will undertake a journey through a great novel: Thomas Mann’s The Magic Mountain, which with stylish irony blends comedy and pathos, love and death, vivid characters and ideas about time and nature into a rich and captivating tapestry. Itself a response to a crisis of values, it has been chosen not just for its relevance to our own era, but also for its ultimate healing message. Through group reading and discussion, we will explore its many-layered depths and mythic resonances, and share in its hero’s quest for meaning. (Though partly devised as a follow-up to the Reading for your Life, this course stands alone and anyone is welcome.)

James Joyce is perhaps the most influential of Ireland’s literary giants. The most written about author in literary criticism, Joyce’s work appears to many as difficult and intimidating. This course shows that Joyce can be enjoyed by everyone. In looking at Dubliners, A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man and extracts from Ulysses this series of lectures will explore the key concerns of the Joyce canon and the writer’s revolutionary approach to language. Classes will also focus on Joyce’s biography and how his family life provided the material for some of the most important texts in literary history.

What is opera? A play with music, a concert with costumes, or both - or something even more? This course will offer an introduction to the history of opera, and its traditions, as well as bringing students up-to-date with new production styles and contexts, including simulcast transmission. We will explore much-loved operas by Mozart, Verdi, Wagner and Puccini, as well as going back to theatre of the baroque, and forwards to our own time. Classes will be illustrated with both sound and DVD recordings, and there will be a group visit to an opera simulcast from The Met: Live in HD (price of ticket not included). Students will be encouraged to appreciate opera ‘in the round’, as a story-telling artform combining the crafts of music and theatre, as well as a mirror of the times for which it was created.

What Does it All Mean?

SPRING AE-QN238

Sandra Bonetto

Why should we be moral? What is the relation between our minds and our brains? Do we really have free will? Is there life after death? How should we feel about death? Does anything we do with our life really matter? And does it matter if it doesn’t matter? What does it all mean? These are perennial questions we ask about ourselves. In this course, students will learn how to think clearly about them and how to tackle the problems of philosophy. Students will be encouraged to ask questions, to try out ideas and raise possible objections to them. In so doing, the course will demonstrate that, far from being an ‘empty study’, philosophy is an indispensable key to understanding our lives. As such, this course itself is an introduction to the subject of philosophy and aims to show how we can become philosophers ourselves.

Creative Step: Creative Writing for Beginners

SPRING AE-WN206

Mark Granier

To write creatively is to think creatively, and thinking creatively can help us make sense of our lives. Sometimes all it takes is one small but decisive step. This course is designed to help people take that step; people who are keen to begin writing but remain intimidated by the blank page. Rather than critiquing students’ older work, emphasis will be on producing something new: crafting effective and imaginative sentences, learning how to be attentive to words and finding ways to surprise readers (including ourselves). As one former student put it, ‘the variety of literary forms really helped to stretch me and brought out different people’s strengths.’ A selection of short stories, flash fiction, poems and various ice-breaking and triggering exercises will offer ways for exploring language and distilling experience. Group discussion will play an important part in these classes.

Creating page-turning characters and their surroundings is what Writing Fiction 2 is about. Fictional characters come alive when they are more real than people with bodies and heartbeats. This course stands alone but complements Writing Fiction 1. The eight classes are tailor-made to suit requirements of emerging and experienced writers. Focus is on tried and tested ways of creating unforgettable characters and placing them in locations, some everyday, some more exotic, but all best suited to storyline/s for novels and short stories. Sessions are arranged to allow time for writing and constructive, individual and group analysis of participant’s work.

THE NATIONAL LIBRARY OF IRELAND
Irish War of Independence 1919-1921
SPRING AE-HN232
Richard McElligott and Conor Mulvagh

This course explores the events, impact and legacy of the Irish War of Independence. It discusses key aspects of the political and military campaigns both at a national and a regional level. The course also examines the Anglo-Irish Treaty signed on 6 December 1921 and the political fallout following its ratification. The course ends with an examination of the Irish civil war and an assessment of the commemoration and memory of the struggle in the ninety odd years since. Run in conjunction with the National Library of Ireland, participants have an opportunity to view a wide variety of primary source material relating to this period.

THE NATIONAL LIBRARY OF IRELAND
Home and Away: Exile in Irish Writing
AUTUMN AE-LN174
Alan Graham

Displacement and the yearning for home has long been a feature of Irish literature. Engaging with prose, drama and poetry, this course will explore the theme of exile in twentieth-century Irish writing. Different forms and understandings of exile will be charted in selected texts, including the plight of the Irish emigrant, the ‘culchie’ in Dublin and the marginalisation of women in Irish society. A particular focus will be the experience of Protestants in independent Ireland. Lectures take place in the National Library.

Regional Genius: Place and Identity in Irish Writing

SPRING AE-LN275
Garrett Fagan

This course looks at the role of place, locality and landscape in Irish writing. Throughout students will be encouraged to explore how authors both respond to and crucially, shape notions of place and community within Ireland. Students will encounter both canonical ‘national’ authors and some less well known writers. A feature of the course is to introduce the variety of writing within Ireland and all of the major genres of poetry, drama, novels and short stories are represented. A key feature of the course will be the opportunity to visit and view the National Library’s manuscript collections of the authors considered.

Joyce in the National Library

MAY AE-LN276
Alan Graham

James Joyce is perhaps the most influential of Ireland’s literary giants. The most written on author in literary criticism, Joyce’s work appears to many as difficult and intimidating. This course shows that Joyce can be enjoyed by everyone. In looking at Dubliners, A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man and extracts from Ulysses this series of lectures will explore the key concerns of the Joyce canon and the writer’s revolutionary approach to language. Classes will also focus on Joyce’s biography and how his family life provided the material for some of the most important texts in literary history.

Irish Women Artists at the Hugh Lane

SPRING AE-AN259

Síle McNulty-Goodwin, Education & Research Curator, Dublin City Gallery The Hugh Lane

The Dublin City Gallery The Hugh Lane may not exist today only for the significant contribution of key women in its establishment. The gallery holds an impressive collection of renowned Irish women artists. This course will trace Irish women artists from the foundation of the gallery to the present day, looking at them both in Ireland and their training abroad. These esteemed artists excelled in many media. Our focus will be on painting, stained glass and sculpture. Key movements such as Post-Impressionism, Cubism and Modern Art movements will be examined and their influence on these women. The gallery’s significant collection of contemporary sculpture will be in focus along with some stained glass works.

Francis Bacon at the Hugh Lane

APR/MAY AE-AN260

Síle McNulty-Goodwin, Education & Research Curator, Dublin City Gallery The Hugh Lane

This course focuses on Francis Bacon’s works at Dublin City Gallery The Hugh Lane. Divided into four distinct areas, the course will look firstly at the artist’s studio, which in 1998 was removed in its entirety from London and brought to the Hugh Lane by a team of conservators. Of huge importance to this collection is conservation and preservation, which will be examined next. Following this will be a study of some of the 7,000 items found in Bacon’s studio, including many books and photographs, and their significance to Bacon’s work. Finally the course will look at Francis Bacon’s international appeal and success, and the global demand for his work.

Adult learners have long talked about the value of learning for their well-being. Students talk about the sense of purpose and pleasure derived from connecting with ideas and like-minded people, about the joy of grasping concepts and ideas and the thrill of discovering a latent talent or their inner philosopher.

Well-being is now a topic of serious academic research as governments look to consider measurement indices which are more multi-dimensional than gross national product (GNP) or gross domestic product (GDP). In parallel to this emphasis on well-being, there is growing interest in the wider benefits of learning, the social outcomes of learning, and in well-being and happiness.

A review of the most contemporary evidence suggests that building the five actions below into our daily lives is important for well-being. Connecting with people, becoming more physically active, taking notice of and reflecting on the world around us, learning something new or re-discovering an old interest, and giving of our time to friends, family and/or community, are all actions we can take to enhance our lives. UCD Adult Education has adopted this framework to inform our programme development and advocacy for adult learners.

YOUR LEARNING: WHAT OUR STUDENTS HAVE SAID

Feel as though my brain has woken up.

Adult learning is such fun and stress free. Love more of the same.

Course has awakened my interest in the subject.

The Saturday walks supplemented the class work very well and brought history to life. A great combination.

Very interesting reflecting on others contributions and various experiences and ideas within the class.

Lively discussions added greatly to atmosphere and learning.

This course prompted me to go to the library/internet to search for books etc in order to learn more.

I enjoyed the group work where we read each other’s work and then commented on it. Although nerve wracking it was helpful to have ideas and feedback on what you’d written.

Did not know what to expect before I started this course and I feel wonderfully informed and liberated after doing it.

National Library location is great.

Thank you for providing such enjoyable and educational courses! I appreciate them very much.

Really enjoyed course. Encouraged me to look at history in a new way and to question my own prejudices.

Has encouraged me to read more – to pay attention to who writes – check their backgrounds etc.

Our field trip to the gallery was a winner.

It tested our creativity and made us think on our feet.

Very enjoyable course with like-minded people.

I find I am learning and developing my internal reserves as the course progresses.

It has encouraged me to read further on the subject i.e. it whetted my appetite in a hitherto unknown subject.

The fact that the class was open to discussion and my class mates were from different areas improved the content.

Very lovely group of people doing the course, great tutor and great way to spend an evening.

Had a really enjoyable time. Am inspired to hold tightly onto the dream and keep going.

I am on the way. Look out!!
The weeks of intensive study were not just ten weeks of academic learning but ten weeks of learning who I was and what I was made of. It’s like all new world of books opening up, and all new me. I’m talking away with opinions and with confidence. This could never have happened one year ago. I came to know Death of a Salesman on the Access course. Willy Loman’s son Biff discovered that his father had dreamt all the wrong dreams. At this stage in my life, I believe I can avoid the Willy Loman legacy and after thirty years in the business world I can bring together all my skills and interests and combine these with a third level qualification so that I can fulfil a new dream. If you are buying a house it’s, “Location Location Location”. If you are going back to University it’s “Access Access Access”. The year has been very important for me as I had almost given up on further education. This course has prepared me very well for University and I am looking forward to the next three years and to fulfilling a lifelong dream. I know my journey is just beginning and I have a lot of work to do; but I also know that I would not have done this without all your support and kindness. Bye bye impatience and bad punctuation hello THE WORLD!! I graduated on Tuesday! Many thanks to the Access Course and getting me started. I know I would not have coped without the help of the Access to Science course and especially the study skills class. I’m so delighted I found that course and completed it before the degree course. I just have to say that I got my ... FIRST choice!!!! I was so overwhelmed and happy!! My mother went all out and bought champagne (actually it was pink cava))!! Thank you so much for everything! Nobody would have looked at my application if you hadn’t given me a chance with the access course! I just wanted to double check that it’s not a mistake, did I get really 79 % (before I call everybody I know)? Am actually sobbing. Sobbing! Because regardless of the results, this is the best thing that has happened to me since I was 16! And I will never be able to thank you enough for letting me do this course! There is really NOTHING I could do or say that could express my gratitude. I felt the tutors took a keen interest in individual student development… were always accessible and helped encourage students as well as address any apprehensions they may have had. I feel we’re in safe hands, also that there may be more to this than I first thought....But I feel good about it, not too overwhelmed. It’s all very positive; I look forward to it unfolding over the next few weeks and months. I just reread that and it sounds gushing! OK, I better do some grocery shopping and then a bit of Home Rule. The Access to Arts and Human Sciences programme was my foundation and apprenticeship as a mature student, to the academic requirements needed to succeed in UCD. All I wanted to do was to read and understand Hamlet, that’s why I took the access course. Now, that’s not enough. Whole new worlds of learning have been opened to me and I’m excited and terrified in equal measure!
