Development Studies Library

What is it?

Development Studies Library (DSL) is a specialist library for development issues. It is located on Level 3 of the UCD James Joyce Library in Belfield.

Who can use it?

UCD students and staff can use the Development Studies Library and borrow its material by accessing the James Joyce Library building using their student or staff cards.

This library is freely open to any member of the development community or the public who wish to use it. No university affiliation is necessary to apply for an access card.

How can I access it?

To obtain an access card, simply contact us by one of the methods below and tell us your name, address and contact information.

Our collection

Development Studies Library has been supported by UCD and Irish Aid since its foundation in 1987. We are one of the country’s primary sources of development research materials and provide specialist support to anyone with an interest in researching development issues. Our collection consists of thousands of books, magazines, journals and electronic material across a variety of development topics.

Further information

Development Studies Library’s website is available at:  http://www.ucd.ie/library/dsl

Opening hours for the James Joyce Library are on our website.

Contacting us

Email:  library@ucd.ie
Postal Address:  Development Studies Library, Level 3, James Joyce Library, UCD, Belfield, Dublin 4
Twitter:  http://twitter.com/#!/ucddsl
Website:  http://www.ucd.ie/library/dsl