JOIN THE LEADING SCHOOL OF SOCIOLOGY IN IRELAND AND PREPARE FOR EXCITING CAREER OPPORTUNITIES IN A DYNAMIC RANGE OF PROFESSIONS

The MSocSc programme in Global Migration and Cultural Difference has been specifically designed to provide advanced interdisciplinary training in race/ethnicity, identity, and migration and to prepare students for career opportunities in a wide variety of diversity-related areas. We are the largest and leading school of Sociology in Ireland. We offer a variety of exciting modules, taught by leading and experienced writers in the discipline and are complemented by the activities of such institutions as the Migration and Citizenship Research Initiative, the Social Science Research Centre, the Geary Institute and the Humanities Institute of Ireland.

The School of Sociology is a vibrant academic community with excellent facilities. Our faculty and postgraduates come from all corners of the world which strengthens our ties to the international sociological community and fosters a dynamic and innovative research culture. Students will undertake independent research as part of their thesis and will have regular one-to-one supervision from a sociologist who has academic experience relevant to their topic. We also run specialised workshops that provide students with the skills necessary to undertake independent research.

PROGRAMME OBJECTIVES

This cutting-edge interdisciplinary Masters programme, delivered by some of Ireland's foremost scholars, provides an understanding of global migration patterns, plural societies, and the national discursive and institutional formations that mediate them.

A masters degree in sociology from UCD offers advanced training in a number of essential skills that are transferable across a wide range of professional and academic fields and which are highly sought after in a variety of diversity-related fields. More specifically, within this programme, you will have the opportunity to develop a critical and comparative understanding of migration, ethnoracial formations, and nations and nationalism, and acquire powerful conceptual and empirical knowledge about race/ethnicity, identity, and difference.
