Introduction

The Seán MacEntee Papers were deposited in UCD Archives in May 1984 by his daughter Dr Máire Cruise O'Brien. The collection is extremely significant, documenting comprehensively a career which included senior ministerial positions in every Fianna Fáil government from 1932 until 1965 when he retired from front bench politics.

MacEntee was born in Belfast in 1889, the son of a publican who served as a Nationalist member of Belfast Corporation from 1897 until 1919. After training as an engineer, MacEntee worked for four years in Belfast before moving to Dundalk where he became involved almost immediately in the independence movement, helping in the formation of a corps of the Irish Volunteers. This became moribund after Redmond's Woodenbridge declaration, but was revitalised in 1915 at which time MacEntee was appointed Adjutant. He had an extremely eventful Easter Week 1916, moving between Dundalk and Dublin, seeking instructions from the Volunteer leadership after MacNeill's countermanaging order, and attempting to relay these to the Louth Volunteers. He eventually fought in the GPO Garrison, was court-martialled and sentenced to death, his sentence being commuted to life imprisonment.

He was released in the general amnesty of June 1917; elected to the national executives of both Sinn Féin and the Irish Volunteers in October 1917; and elected Sinn Fein MP for South Monaghan in the 1918 general election. An attempt to develop his career as a consulting engineer in Belfast in 1919 was interrupted by the War of Independence. He served as Vice-Commandant of the Belfast Brigade of the IRA until April 1921 when he was transferred to Dublin to direct a special anti-partition campaign in connection with the May general election.

It was on the partition issue that he voted against the Treaty, regarding the oath of allegiance as a much less significant obstacle to a resolution of the conflict; and throughout his political career he maintained a wholly consistent position on the futility of attempted coercion of unionists. He resumed his engineering career in Dublin in the firm of MacEntee & O'Kelly; commanded the IRA unit in Marlboro Street Post Office at the outbreak of the Civil War; fought with Cathal Brugha in the Hammam Hotel; and was interned in Kilmainham and Gormanstown until December 1923.

After his release he devoted himself more fully to his engineering practice, although he did contest unsuccessfully the county Dublin bye-election of 1924. He was elected TD for the same constituency in the June 1927 election, and was returned at every subsequent general election until 1969; for the county Dublin, Dublin Townships, and Dublin South-East constituencies consecutively.

MacEntee served as Minister for Finance, 1932-9; for Industry and Commerce, 1939-41; Minister for Local Government and Public Health, 1941-8; Minister for Finance, 1951-4; Minister for Health, 1957-65, and Minister for Social Welfare, 1957-61; and Tanaiste, 1959-65. Among the highlights of a long and distinguished Ministerial career were the Anglo-Irish

Financial Agreement, 1938; the Trade Union Act, 1941; the reorganisation of the Health services and the establishment of separate Departments of Health and Social Welfare; and the fluoridation of water supplies in Ireland.

Besides these and many other Government matters, the collection documents his senior position within Fianna Fáil; his pivotal role in election campaigns; his concern with attempts to undermine democratic institutions by subversive and illegal organisations; his membership of the Council of State; and his contribution as an Irish delegate to the Council of Europe.

Arrangement and description

The arrangement of the material is straightforward, with main sections based upon his early political career (A); each of the Ministerial positions held by him (B-E); material relating to elections and referenda (F); to Fianna Fáil (G); to Partition, Northern Ireland and Anglo-Irish relations (H); revolutionary and subversive organisations (J); texts of speeches and related matter (K); his membership of the Council of State (L); the Council of Europe (M); research material, historical enquiries, and requests for interviews (N); biographical material (O); and personal documents and memorabilia (P). There is a section of material relating to his case for libel against Proinsias MacAonghusa arising from allegations about his 1916 record (Q); and sections of printed matter (R) and Photographs (S).

Descriptions have been made as extensive as possible, whether the unit of description be individual items, compound items, or bound volumes. Where it has not been possible to describe every item within large compound items, the more important documents have been described individually and the substance of the more routine material has been summarised. With material of Departmental or Ministerial origin, file titles are generally those originally given. Titles have, where appropriate, been given to untitled files and other compound items.

 Subject: O'Connell Street, Dublin, Easter Week, 1916, including events in Dundalk and county Meath immediately preceding Easter Week resulting in his being in Dublin during the Rising.
Includes comments by the interviewing officer; This statement is an account of his experiences during the Rising, which the witness started to write in August 1917 from earlier notes while he was a prisoner in Crumlin Road Gaol, Belfast, where he spent six weeks. He continued it after his release, and he finished it before he left Belfast in, I understand, 1920. The first five paragraphs, which are inserted by way of introduction, were taken down by me from his dictation at an interview which I had with the witness in his office.
 He would also wish to give an account of his association with the Volunteer Executive during the later period, but he cannot at present find the time. He has, however, prepared some notes on the pogroms in Belfast in 1920 which he intends to revise and present to the Bureau' [see P67/519]. 122pp

- 125 1938 3 draft handwritten letters from MacEntee to de Valera, offering his resignation as Minister for Finance on the basis of his perception of the majority Cabinet view on public spending.
'On occasions our differences upon this question have been carried almost to the point of my resignation. These differences have been surmounted and I have carried on in the hope that experience would teach its own lessons, that as the ill-effects of the policy which the Cabinet insisted upon pursuing manifested themselves in rising costs, increasing unemployment, higher taxes, and diminished resources, a more prudent and provident spirit would inform our counsels when proposals involving increased expenditure, and therefore increased burdens for our

- 125 contd already over-burdened people, were under consideration. Such hopes were extinguished some months ago when the army estimate was under review, and I would have asked you then to relieve me of my responsibilities but that in the light of the international situation I felt that I had to carry on in my office and discharge its functions as best I could, in view of the need for the Government to present an unbroken appearance at such a time'. He points to continuing indications that members of the Government are preparing for a campaign of inflationary spending.

- 132 28 April 1939 Memorandum by MacEntee for the Government, referring to Budget decisions taken at a meeting of the Cabinet on the previous day, and reiterating his own views as being at variance with those decisions. He reviews in detail over-estimation of expenditure on seven major services in the previous three year's Budgets and recommends a reduction in the allowance for overestimation for the coming year; he questions the Government decision to balance the Budget by taxation rather than by economies and examines the effect of increased direct and indirect taxation and reduced personal expenditure on the economy, with particular reference to increased unemployment, he argues in favour of an adjustment of Earned Income Reliefs in favour of the taxpayer and requests an early meeting of Government to consider the whole Budgetary position. 18pp
- 133 30 April 1939 Copy letter from MacEntee to de Valera, referring to discussion at that morning's Cabinet meeting, of MacEntee's Budget proposals, MacEntee has been asked to agree to increase the Revenue Commissioners' estimates of tax revenue for the year, to increase the allowance for over-estimation on expenditure estimates, and to make no reduction in public expenditure, he reiterates his view of the need for increases in taxation and cuts in expenditure with particular reference to employment schemes and unemployment assistance; he asks that the Revenue Commissioners' estimates be accepted' if the Budget is to be an honest one', and points out 'that even if the moderate economies which I am asking for be made, it will still be necessary to impose more than £1,300,000 of additional taxation upon our already over-burdened people'. He emphasises his obligations as Minister for Finance and, given the deadlock which has been reached in Cabinet on the subject of the Budget, he tenders his resignation. 4pp

185 November 1936-
November 1937 Copy of a letter from MacEntee, to de Valera, concerning the method of constituting the second legislative chamber to ensure that 'while the majority of the Second House would have the same general political outlook as the majority in the Dáil, it would nevertheless retain independence to review, criticise, and, where necessary, to suggest revision in the details and accidental features of Government policy'; suggestions concentrate on an electorate composed of members of local authorities, and include detailed proposals for the division of the electorate into three constituencies (13 November 1936, 10pp); copy of a letter from MacEntee, to de Valera, concerning the likelihood of a Government defeat in the Dáil on the proposals of the Select Committee on the Senate Electoral (panel Members) Bill, the consequent inevitability of a general election, and the weakness of the Government in fighting an election in opposition to the Committee's scheme (14 November 1937, 4pp); copy of a memorandum [by MacEntee?] entitled 'Notes on the composition of a proposed second legislative chamber', dealing with qualifications for membership and election, functional and general procedure, and the constituting and responsibilities of permanent general committees and standing committees; marked 'secret' ([1937], 86pp).

- 186 [1937] 2 handwritten draft memoranda by MacEntee for the President, criticising Fianna Fáil proposals on the electoral system for the constituting of the Seanad, examining the likely effects of a defeat for the Government on the proposals in the Dáil; and the issues on which a subsequent general election would be fought, including the high cost of living and the dispute with Britain. ‘As I see the position we have now come to this: that the Labour Party representatives on the Select Committee having sold themselves to Fine Gael in exchange for undue representation in an electoral college, we are now to make a bid to buy them back again by discarding the better features of our own Bill in favour of a scheme which will create a Seanad no better than that which we destroyed. The proposal to make the Dáil the electorate represents machine control in its most blatant and absolute form’. 14pp, 7pp
- 187 October-
November 1937 Seanad panels. Minister's notes: 3 draft memoranda by MacEntee on methods of nominating and electing to the Seanad, members from panels other than the Administrative Panel ([October 1937], 4pp, 11pp, 12pp); 2 draft memoranda by MacEntee on the sectionalising of the Administrative Panel and the method of nominating and electing members to each section ([October 1937], 6pp, 4pp); minute from J J McElligott, commenting upon the disproportionate influence of urban areas in the suggested representation in the Electoral College, and the restrictions on eligibility for nomination to the Administrative Panel (30 October 1937, 2pp); cutting from the Irish Times, Irish Independent, and Irish Press (13 November 1937, 3 items) concerning the proceedings of the Select Committee on the Senate Electoral (Panel Members) Bill, the defeat of the Government Group in the Committee, and the scheme for the election of Seanad panel members approved by the majority on the Committee.

- 298 11 February [1948] Confidential letter from Erskine Childers referring to his previous letter on his position and lack of promotion.
 There is no need for me to repeat the statements in the other letter. It is bad for the Party in the eyes of the waverers and bad for me to be relegated to a position where my work is unknown and where the pioneering is virtually finished... Since I saw you last Robert Barton (not to be quoted please to anyone) hinted to me that a Protestant was unlikely to be appointed to the Ministries of Justice, Health, External Affairs, Education, and probably Social Welfare... I cannot believe it but others in Fianna Fáil have hinted at this and I should be glad to know the truth'.
