Our new UCD brand mark and masterbranding

Our new brand mark communicates the intellectual excellence and strong heritage of UCD, while positioning the university as dynamic and forward-looking. UCD is changing to meet the challenges of the 21st century. As a tangible expression of these changes, the university has moved into a masterbranded visual identity system. This means that the many disparate and independently created marks previously in use are now superseded by a single, unified articulation of our identity.

UCD is Ireland’s largest university. Our objective is to be the country’s premier academic institution, and to become one of the top 30 universities in Europe. Key to achieving this is speaking with one voice. Each of our colleges, schools and other units will now be associated with a central and cohesive brand, making it easier to manage and implement. This rationalisation will have benefits for all.
The UCD brand mark elements

Our brand mark is composed of three elements – the UCD Castles, the UCD Dublin Logotype and the UCD Harp. The brand mark shape is uniquely formed by the UCD Dynamic Arc. All of the brand mark elements have been specially drawn and must not be redrawn in any way.

Clearance zone
To ensure that nothing interferes with our brand mark’s visibility, we have created a protective clearance zone to set off the brand mark from type, photographs and illustrations. The cyan rectangle shown here represents the minimum clearance zone for our brand mark.

Minimum size
Never reproduce our brand mark at sizes less than 10mm wide.
Our new brand mark and the UCD coat of arms

Up to this point we have always used our formal coat of arms for all visual expressions of UCD. We will now retain the UCD coat of arms for ceremonial and formal uses only. Our new brand mark will be used for all UCD visual identity and communications uses.

UCD brand mark usage guidelines

Never apply a keyline to the colour brand mark.

Never alter the colours of the brand mark.

Never alter or distort the brand mark.

Never replace the logotype with a typeface.

Never use the logotype alone.

Never add additional elements to the brand mark.

Never remove the gradients from the brand mark colours.

Never alter the proportions of the brand mark elements.

There must be a significant contrast of colour when positioning the brand mark on a colour background.

Never alter the shape of the brand mark.

Never create a grayscale version of the brand mark.

The examples on this page represent some incorrect uses of the UCD brand mark, they are not intended to cover all incorrect variants.
UCD brand mark colours

The brand mark artwork is always reproduced using the four-colour process. There is no spot version of the UCD brand mark. Spot colour approximations are supplied here to assist in the roll-out of new applications.

Using our typography consistently

Our new branding system and stationery suite is typeset using the Bliss typeface family.

Bliss is published by Jeremy Tankard and can be purchased online at the website www.typography.net. Bliss is licensed in weight packs, for instance, Bliss Regular contains all the fonts related to the Regular weight, including the Small Capitals font which has the non-aligning numerals used in our stationery. UCD has purchased a limited number of licences for the Bliss typeface that are available for all Schools, Colleges and Academic Units. To obtain a licence, please contact communications@ucd.ie

The Verdana font family is the preferred alternative typeface when the Bliss typeface is not accessible. Verdana is supplied with most common applications and is available on the majority of PCs.
Visual relationship of the constituent units of UCD to the masterbrand

UCD now has one single brand mark. All previous identities, sub-brands, logos etc, have been superseded by this masterbrand. A clear, logical system now communicates the relationship of UCD to its constituent units. The masterbrand will be supported by the relevant unit name, typeset in the Bliss font family.

Standard relationship of the UCD masterbrand and a unit name

UCD School of Architecture, Landscape and Civil Engineering

The UCD stationery system suite uses a specific (non-standard) visual relationship between the UCD brand mark and its constituent units. Please refer to page 22 of this brand identity guidelines.
Branding system usage guidelines

Never alter the proportions of the branding system.

Never centre the unit name under the brand mark.

Never replace the logotype with a unit name.

Never lock a unit name to the brand mark.

Never alter the proportions of the branding system to give more prominence to a unit name.

Never lock a unit name onto the brand mark or create a bounding shape surrounding both.

The examples on this page represent some incorrect uses of the UCD brand mark, they are not intended to cover all incorrect variants.
Typesetting the unit names

Each unit name must be prefixed with UCD. The unit name must always be typeset in upper and lowercase and never in all capitals.

UCD School of Architecture, Landscape and Civil Engineering

These measurements are for an A4 size application. This system can be scaled accordingly for other sizes.

UCD School of Architecture, Landscape and Civil Engineering

The unit name must never be typeset in italics.

UCD School of Architecture, Landscape and Civil Engineering

The unit name must never be typeset in all capitals.
Standard size relationship of our brand mark and a unit name – top-alignment

The key point of our new UCD branding system is that there is no longer marks for individual units, rather it is a system of relationships that is applied in each particular case. There is a top-alignment option for applying the UCD brand mark and unit name onto communications materials.

Brand mark 40mm high + Unit name typeset in Bliss Medium 14 point on 17.5 leading = UCD Branding System

These measurements are for an A4 size application. This system can be scaled accordingly for other sizes.
Standard size relationship of our brand mark and a unit name – base-alignment

The UCD branding system has some flexibility in its application. There is also a base-alignment option for applying the UCD brand mark and unit name onto communications materials.

Standard size relationship of our brand mark and the full university name – top-alignment

There is one exception in the UCD branding system – when the communication item is coming from the university level and not a college, school or other unit. The full version of the university name must be used along with its Irish translation, as shown. They must both appear in the same type size.

Unit name variations

There are variations in the word count of many unit names within UCD. The examples below show how the branding system works for unit names which are typeset on one, two, three or four lines.

All align to the horizontal centre line of the navy panel in the brand mark.
UCD branding consistency and unit individuality

The UCD branding system has been devised to ensure consistency at the university level. It is important, however, at the unit level each has the freedom to communicate their particular message in an individual and unique way.

UCD stationery system

The UCD stationery system accommodates two language formats – dual language (English & Irish) and Irish-only. Compliance with the Official Languages Act requires that either version be used. There is no English-only format.*

Dual language stationery (English & Irish)

Irish-only stationery

Two-sided

One sided

* Authoritative guidance on the Official Languages Act and its implications should be sought from Mr John Coman, Corporate and Legal Affairs Secretary, ext 1411 or from Edel Kirley, University Solicitor, ext 1251. Information on Irish translations may be obtained from Clár Ní Bhuchalla, Irish Language Officer, ext 8208.

 Business Cards – A dual version should be available where the individual provides a service in the Irish language or requests an Irish version. In other cases an English-only business card is acceptable.
Typesetting of UCD stationery information

In order to maintain consistency in our stationery system the typesetting conventions below should be adhered to when reproducing any UCD stationery item.

The UCD stationery system suite has a specific visual relationship format for the UCD brand mark and its constituent units. This relationship format must only be used in conjunction with the stationery master artwork templates.

UCD letterhead and compliment slip examples

UCD letterheads and compliment slips should only be reproduced from the master artwork templates.

There is one layout structure for both language variants of the UCD letterhead and compliments slip. Full size examples are shown on the following pages.

Accreditation marks and additional reference information are positioned at the base of the letterhead or compliments slip. All accreditation and membership marks must be colourised 50% black, so as to keep the new UCD brand mark dominant.
