CONTEXT

Biographical History

Desmond FitzGerald, christened Thomas Joseph, was born in London in 1888 of Irish emigrant parents. As a young man, an ardent interest in Ireland was reflected in his admiration for the poetry of W.B. Yeats and his learning the Irish language at the Gaelic League class in London, where he met his future wife Mabel Washington McConnell.

Mabel was born in Belfast on 4 July 1884. Her interest in politics and Irish nationalism, demonstrated initially as a student in Queen's University Belfast, was reflected in her joining the Gaelic League while working as a secretary in London. Desmond and Mabel were married in 1911.

In 1913, Desmond and Mabel FitzGerald moved to Irish-speaking west Kerry, where their knowledge of the Irish language was extended further and political links were established with figures such as Ernest Blythe and The O'Rahilly. In January 1915, Desmond was expelled from county Kerry, having convinced the Royal Irish Constabulary that he was signalling to German submarines from his home on the western peninsula. His consequent move to Bray, county Wicklow, and the organisation of a branch of the Irish Volunteers was curtailed by his arrest and sentence to six month's imprisonment for a speech discouraging recruitment to the British army. Desmond was released three weeks before the Easter Rising and was present in the General Post Office as a non-combatant. Imprisonment followed until mid-1917.

After his release from a further term of imprisonment in 1919, Desmond was appointed Director of Publicity for the Dáil Government. The Irish Bulletin was launched by him in November 1919 in order to offset the official British accounts of the political situation in Ireland. His editorial work resulted in yet another term of imprisonment, but release enabled him to participate in the Treaty negotiations.

With the resignation of the anti-Treaty members of government in January 1922, and the emergence of the Irish Free State, Desmond became Minister for External Affairs and represented Ireland at the Imperial Conferences and at the League of Nations throughout much of this period. He was appointed Minister for Defence in 1927, a post he held until the defeat of the government in the general election of 1932 and the coming of de Valera to power. After 1932, Desmond served as Opposition Deputy and Senator until 1943. He died in April 1947.

Archival History

The papers of Desmond and Mabel FitzGerald were deposited by their children, particularly Dr. Garret FitzGerald, in May 1987.

CONTENT AND STRUCTURE

Scope and Content

The majority of the collection is arranged in groups corresponding to aspects of Desmond's political life. The chronological treatment of his appointments and personal involvement within political affairs (sections 1,2,3,4,5,6 and 7) is complemented by associated material within sections 8,9 and 10, where more general political material supplements those documents relating specifically to Desmond's contribution to developments.

The later sections of the collection provide some indication of the values and personal motivation nurtured by the political figure. His interest in the literary sphere and his association as a young man with the group of poets known as the Imagists, which included T E Hulme, Edward Storer and, later, the American Ezra Pound, is reflected in section 11, Literary and Philosophical works, with his own writings and correspondence with literary figures. Material detailing the work of Desmond with the university of Notre Dame, Indiana, and his giving of lectures in political and social philosophy offer an additional insight into an ardent interest in Catholic philosophy and Thomism.

Section 13, Family and Personal Material, provides a further perspective from which to approach the collection. The letters from Desmond to Mabel (P80/1937-1426) facilitate an appreciation of political events described in a personal manner, without the formality and technicalities of official negotiation and correspondence found in earlier divisions of the collection such as sections 5 and 6.

The family perspective of the collection is most evident within the final division of the collection, section 14, Papers of Mabel FitzGerald. The material in this section was described and arranged at a date later than the rest of the collection, but provides a natural conclusion to the more personal sections of Desmond's own papers.

The section is predominantly composed of correspondence which fell naturally into two broad divisions: political and family. The political material lent itself to arrangement largely along subject matter headings. Desmond's political activities are traced alongside those of his wife, and the personal nature of the material, as in section 13, contrasts well with the more formal nature of the earlier sections of the collection.

A more personal appreciation of Desmond and Mabel is provided by this section. Correspondence between them in 1910 and 1911 refers to the opposition of Mabel's father to their romantic association (p80/1490-1505). The correspondence between Mabel and George Bernard Shaw vividly illuminates her support for nationalism which was often at variance to the opinions of her husband until later in life (P80/1551-61). The final three subdivisions of section 4, Towards the Irish Free State and beyond, detail her gradually changing political views in sympathy with those of Desmond. The majority of letters within the political division of section 14 demanded individual descriptive attention.

The family division of section 14 demands very little arrangement as related correspondence tended to be grouped together when the collection arrived. Much has consequently been left in files. The relationship between family members has been detailed wherever possible. Subjects addressed include the death of family members and the settlement of estates. Cross references have been supplied throughout section 14 in order to illuminate its integral nature with the rest of the collection. The papers merit addressing in their entirety as the politically-orientated material cannot be divorced from the personal if the collection is to be perceived from the varied perspectives it offers.

2.1 War of Independence, 1919–21 [–22]

2.1.1 Correspondence

2.1.1.1 Secretary, Dáil Éireann

P80/14

January 1920–April 1922

31 items

Correspondence between the Director of Publicity, Desmond FitzGerald, his temporary successor, Erskine Childers, and Diarmud Ó hEigeartaigh, Secretary, Dáil Éireann, concerning the activities of the Publicity Department. Included are reports by FitzGerald on his trips to London to meet with and cultivate foreign correspondents, persuade them to take the Irish Bulletin, cover Ireland sympathetically, or have special correspondents seconded there; and reports by Childers on Departmental activity, FitzGerald's arrest, a raid on the Department, and the foiled attempts of Dublin Castle to issue forged Irish Bulletins using captured equipment. Also included are copy extracts from correspondence between Michael Collins [Minister for Finance] and Art O'Brien [Dáil spokesman in London] concerning Childers' arrest and subsequent release; copy memoranda from Ó hEigeartaigh requesting particulars of the Department's costs and ordering a pamphlet on British atrocities; and copy correspondence between Ó hEigeartaigh at the London Peace Conference, and Colm Ó Murchada, Acting Secretary to the Dublin Ministry, relating to the reservations of the Ministers in London about the provisional decision of the Dublin Ministers to re-organise Publicity into four separate sub-departments with the Director of Publicity as general manager.

2.1.1.2 Acting Director of Publicity

P80/15 June–December 1921

157 items

Routine exchange of memoranda between FitzGerald and Pronsias Ó Gallchoir [Frank Gallagher], his assistant and acting Director of Publicity during FitzGerald's attendance at the London Peace Conference, mainly relating to the preparation, printing and distribution of the Irish Bulletin and sundry propaganda, the inclusion and removal of individuals from the Bulletin's mailing list, Departmental accounts and the search for new office premises in Dublin. Included are requests from FitzGerald for casualty lists, statistics, statements and reports on British excesses and breaches of the Truce; covering memoranda from Gallagher enclosing the items requested; and an exchange between the two concerning Gallagher's status and responsibility within the Department, and his complaint that the appointment of FitzGerald's wife Mabel, as the Mansion's House temporary Publicity Officer, had arrogated his authority. Also included are three handwritten memoranda from Mabel FitzGerald requesting and acknowledging receipt of literature relating to the London Peace Conference and a report by her on a series of raids at Cullen Rectory, County Clare, by men claiming to be from the IRA.

P80/16 December 1921–April 1922

13 items

Correspondence between Gallagher and FitzGerald relating to the former's resignation as editor of the Irish Bulletin and assistant to FitzGerald, his request for a reference, his claim for moneys in lieu of leave not taken, and FitzGerald's insistence that he return a departmental typewriter. 2.1.1.3 President, Dáil Éireann

P80/17 May 1921–June 1922

13 items

Correspondence between President de Valera and Frank Gallagher, mainly dealing with arrangements for press interviews, the proposed analog of the Villard Commission and the possibility of a special weekly edition of the Irish Bulletin designed for domestic rather than foreign consumption. Included are copy letters from Gallagher informing de Valera of the dispatch of his telegram to Pope Benedict XV in response to the exchange of telegrams between the Papacy and King George V at the opening of the London Peace Conference, and enclosing a copy of the special edition of the Bulletin containing the telegram and the recommendations of the Committee established by the President to review the possibility of extending publicity [both missing]; a dossier on pro-British bias in the Irish Independent and the Freeman's Journal; and a letter from Brigadier-General Frank Crozier [Commandant of the Auxiliaries to the Royal Irish Constabulary until his resignation in February 1921] expressing the hope, in the light of the work he had done to educate English public opinion on the Irish situation and the resultant difficulties he had encountered, that the Irish Government would provide him with a position. Also includes letter from President Arthur Griffith to FitzGerald, ordering him to London to take whatever action necessary to stem the extraordinary and completely unchecked propaganda in the English press, 'representing the Nationalists of the North-East as the aggressors in the present deplorable conflict in that part of Ireland' (20 June 1922).

2.1.1.4 Army and the Minister for Defence

P80/18 June 1921–March 1922

11 items

Ministers for Defence

Correspondence between Childers, FitzGerald and successive Ministers for Defence, Cathal Brugha and Richard Mulcahy, mainly concerning inter-departmental cooperation and propaganda strategy. Includes request from Childers that Brugha and Chief of Staff [General Richard Mulcahy] meet with him to discuss his proposals that the army supply him with regular reports and information that could be used as counter-propaganda, and update him on current policy as regards counter-reprisals and executions; advice by Childers as to how the Government should react to incidents such as the killings of Major Compton Smith and the R.I.C. Inspector McGrath. 'There is very valuable publicity to be made out of events like that ... but we lose the value of it if the public know nothing until action has been taken. We should strengthen our position by open statements made at the time which could give the English people a knowledge of how things stand' (4 July 1921). Incomplete letter from FitzGerald criticising as unauthorised and unjustified the Army's arrest of the London Times representative in Dublin. 'The seizure of Mr Kay was calculated to prove the contention of our enemies that journalists who visited Ireland were terrorised'.

Letters from successive Ministers for Home Affairs, Austin Stack and Eamon Duggan, mainly forwarding material for publication, and items of potential interest to Publicity. Included are a copy of the Increase of Rent Decree, 1921; copy letter from Joseph Connolly, Irish Consul in New York, advising in light of adverse American economic conditions, that all emigration be halted; copy of a letter from Thomas Foran, President, Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, enclosing copy of a letter from the Chairman of the union's Belfast Seamen's Section, concerning the fatal shooting of a union member, James McCluskey, during an Orange pogrom; and copy of a letter from the Registrar of the Longford District Court detailing the activities of the local courts. Also included are letters from Stack requesting particulars of Republican prisoners' conditions and instructing Publicity to check and remedy, if verified, a report that Northern Unionist newspapers were supplying the Press Association with news reports; draft report by Eamon Duggan on the activities of the Republican courts and police; and request from Duggan that FitzGerald assess as to suitability for publication an enclosed memorandum on the formation of the Civic Guard.

P80/25 November 1921–March 1922

14 items

Republican Police

Correspondence between Frank Gallagher and the Chief of the Republican Police Force, mainly relating to the regular supply of information on police activity for publicity purposes. Included are accounts of the Force's success in combating criminal gangs, illicit distilling and poaching, and enforcing licensed trading hours and school attendance; acknowledgements by Gallagher of information received; suggestions by him that daily reports be forwarded to Publicity; requests from the Chief of Police that Gallagher rectify the tendency of the press to refer to the police as the IRA police; and publicise a directive issued to Divisional and Brigade Commandants instructing them to ask the populace to forward their complaints to the local police or military rather than to Government departments and military HQs.

2.1.1.7 Agriculture

P80/26 20 June 1921

1p

Letter from Kevin O'Shiel, Department of Agriculture, to Gallagher, in reply to a query concerning the writer Brinsley McNamara, who had tendered his services to the Dáil. O'Shiel details his literary output, notes his extreme sympathy with the strict Republican ideal and suggests that he would be best employed as a pamphleteer 'as there is a good deal of gall in his ink'.

P80/27 23 December 1921

Handwritten extracts from the declaration of rights issued by the states of Massachusetts, North Carolina and Virginia in 1776 [Irish Bulletin, 28 July 1921, 'The Defiance of America in 1776'].
- P80/189 –
P80/196 July–October 1921
25pp
Eight handwritten and annotated typescript drafts of articles relating to the distorted and misrepresentative coverage in the British press of the Irish situation and the peace negotiations. Included are rebuttals of press claims that Britain had offered Ireland Dominion status, that the Irish people had lost all confidence in their Sinn Féin leaders, that the Republicans had breached the Truce, and that de Valera's telegram to the Pope had been motivated by a desire to wreck the London Peace Conference.
- P80/197 July–September 1921
32pp
Handwritten and annotated typescript draft articles summarising and analysing the official peace correspondence between David Lloyd George, Prime Minister, and de Valera, June–September 1921, with particular reference to Lloyd George's letters of 26 August and 7 September. Includes a typescript synopsis of the total correspondence, and typescript copy of a letter from the Dáil Cabinet to Lloyd George, declaring their willingness to participate

- P80/197 in a peace conference and affirming Ireland's status as an independent and sovereign state.
- P80/198 [August] 1921

- P80/199 [August] 1921
6pp
Draft handwritten and typescript article, 'Destruction of Premises and Property by British Forces in Ireland, 1 January 1920–11 July 1921', listing the numbers of premises and properties wholly or partially destroyed by Crown Forces in all parts of Ireland prior to the declaration of martial law, 10 December 1920, and in martial and non-martial law areas, 11 December 1920–11 July 1921.
- P80/200 August 1921
6pp
Draft handwritten issue of the Irish Bulletin entitled 'A Fourth Chronological Record of Events'. Records events relating to the Anglo-Irish peace negotiations, 23 July–22 August, the fourth in a series of special chronologies.
- P80/201 [September] 1921
19pp
Handwritten and annotated typescript draft of an article, 'Serious Breaches of the Truce', detailing major infringements of the terms of the Truce by British forces, 11 July–25 September 1921.

- P80/202 September 1921
10pp
Copy of an account of the discovery of the mutilated bodies of Harry and Patrick Loughnane, Shanaglish, County Galway, 29 November 1920, three days after their arrest by a mixed party of Auxiliaries and RIC; handwritten report on the Republican Court of Inquiry into their deaths the following September.
- P80/203 August–November 1921
24pp
Handwritten and annotated typescript drafts of articles dealing with the deplorable conditions in Ballykinlar, Rath, Spike Island and Bere Island Internment Camps. Included are copy extracts from reports, letters, and statements by current and former internees, and press cuttings reporting the maltreatment of prisoners.
- P80/204 September 1921
24pp
Handwritten and annotated typescript drafts of an article, 'Rescues and escapes of Sinn Féin prisoners', written in the aftermath of the escape of nearly a hundred prisoners from Rath Internment Camp, 9 September 1921, recalling previous rescues and escapes of republican prisoners from gaols and internment camps, November 1918–September 1921.
- P80/205 30 September 1921
3pp
Drafts of two handwritten reports announcing that the Minister of Economic Affairs [R C Barton] had arranged a conference between representatives of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company and their striking employees, and summarising his address to the conference. Includes typescript copy of the settlement reached.

P80/206 October 1921

11pp

Handwritten drafts of a two part article, 'The National Government at work', listing the twenty seven national and local strikes, lockouts and disputes successfully settled by the Ministry of Labour in September and October 1921, and detailing the activities and accomplishments of the Republican police since the Truce.

P80/207 1921

7pp

Handwritten and annotated typescript draft review of the activities of the Department of Trade since its establishment in April 1919, with particular reference to the appointment of trade consuls abroad and the promotion of indigenous industry.

P80/208 September 1921

2 items

Handwritten draft report entitled 'A Dominion view of the so-called Dominion Status' [Irish Bulletin, Vol 5, No 7, 7 September 1921]. Refers to and quotes from an editorial in a leading Canadian paper, the Toronto Star, pointing out that the terms offered Ireland in the British peace proposals of 20 July fell far short of Dominion status; press cutting of the Canadian article.

P80/209 September 1921

8pp

Two drafts of an article, 'Mr Churchill's speech—the 'generous' government which threatens real war'. Rejects a claim by Winston Churchill, British Colonial Secretary, in a speech in Dundee, 24 September, that Britain had offered Ireland Dominion Home Rule in their July proposals; dismisses his assertion that Ulster would not be forced against her will into a united Ireland; repudiates his warning that civil war would result from Irish independence; and condemns his threat of an all-out Anglo-Irish war if Ireland rejected British proposals for a settlement.

P80/210 September 1921

12pp

Handwritten draft of an article, 'The type of mind which directed the British terror in Ireland', written in response to a letter in the London Morning Post from Brigadier General C Prescott Decie, Divisional Commissioner of Constabulary in Munster, February 1920–July 1921. Contains a detailed litany of the excesses that characterised Decie's regime, with particular reference to the brutal reprisal system instituted by him. Includes draft of a second article concerning Lord Sydenham, late Secretary, Committee of Imperial Defence and author of a subsequent letter to the Post endorsing Decie's sentiments.

P80/211 October 1921

3pp

Rough draft of an article repudiating allegations by the Earl of Arran in an article, 'A Plea for the Southern Irish Loyalist' in the National Review, warning of the appalling treatment to which southern Loyalists would be subjected by a hostile Republican government and suggesting that the British government subsidise their emigration.

P80/212 October 1921

4pp

Two handwritten drafts of an article by Frank Gallagher, condemning the sinister misrepresentations of Ireland's case evident in King George V's reply to Pope Benedict XV's telegram expressing joy at the opening of the peace conference.

P80/213 20 October 1921

2pp

Handwritten and typescript draft of a special edition of the Irish Bulletin entitled 'The Source and Cause of the Troubles in Ireland', containing an amended copy of de Valera's telegram to Pope Benedict XV thanking him for the interest in the welfare of the Irish people expressed in his published telegram to King George V, and voicing the confidence 'that the ambiguities in the reply sent in the name of King George, will not mislead you as it may the uninformed, into believing that the troubles are "in" Ireland, or that the people of Ireland own allegiance to the British King'.

- P80/214 October 1921
5pp
Draft handwritten review of a pamphlet by George Russell [AE] on the London Peace Conference, Ireland and the Empire at the Court of Conscience, circularised with a previous issue of the Irish Bulletin.
- P80/215 1921
1p
Draft introduction to an article, 'The War that may be resumed', containing the transcripts of statements [absent] from victims of British outrages, to draw to the attention of the British public the atrocities that would recur were the peace negotiations to fail.
- P80/216 October 1921
14pp
Handwritten draft of an incomplete article by Frank Gallagher entitled 'Threats of force an obstacle to peace'. Deplores the propensity of leading members of the British Government and certain sections of the British press to threaten a return to war were the Irish to continue to press for independence; warns that force in Ireland would fail as it had always failed; and stresses that a solution to the conflict lay with negotiation, goodwill and justice. Includes press cuttings referring to Ireland's claim to full independence and possibility of renewed war.
- P80/217 [October] 1921
9pp
Handwritten and amended typescript drafts of an article by Frank Gallagher entitled 'Some comments on Mr Lloyd George's speech'. Welcomes admissions by the Prime Minister in a Commons speech that the Republican representatives in Dáil Éireann had been duly and fairly elected by a sympathetic public that had freely repudiated the authority of the British Government. Dispels Lloyd George's fears that an independent Ireland could threaten the security of the British Empire.

P80/218 1921

8pp

Handwritten draft article by Frank Gallagher, 'The position of North-East Ulster', repudiating a claim by the Northern Prime Minister, Sir James Craig, that Sinn Féin would attack the Ulster Protestant community if the peace negotiations failed; depicting the Northern Ireland state as a failed political and economic entity; and promising that a Republican government would recognise Protestant rights and principles and allow Ulster a generous measure of local autonomy. Included are handwritten extracts from speeches by Craig, and press editorials on the negotiations and the position of Ulster.

P80/219 [November] 1921

5pp

Handwritten draft article, 'Sir James Craig's speech—what are the rights of Ulster?', criticising Craig's formal rejection in the Northern Parliament of the British settlement proposals, and dismissing the right of the four predominantly Protestant counties of Armagh, Antrim, Derry and Down to veto unity, 'vote themselves out of Ireland ... and declare themselves subject to the government of another country'.

P80/220 November 1921

3pp

Annotated typescript response to a statement by J M Andrews, Northern Minister for Labour, representing the British Cabinet proposal of an all-Ireland parliament with Dominion powers as 'a disgraceful betrayal of Ulster'.

P80/221 November 1921

7pp

Handwritten and annotated typescript draft article, 'Peace or War on a real scale—British conference delegate threatens a renewal of terrorism', consisting of a reply to a threat delivered by Sir L Worthington Evans, British War Secretary and Peace Conference delegate, that Britain would not shrink from a 'real' war if the Irish continued to press for independence. Warns that Britain could defeat Ireland militarily but would have to resort to terror tactics that had shamed them worldwide.

P80/222 November 1921

5pp

Annotated typescript draft entitled, 'Is the war upon the Irish people to be resumed?' Considers the prospect of renewed warfare in the light of the faltering peace negotiations, incessant threats of resumption of war by British Ministers, renewed repression by Crown Forces, and a British press campaign mixing allegations of obstructionism on the part of the Irish plenipotentiaries with accusations of persistent Truce infringements by the IRA.

P80/223 November 1921

4pp

Annotated typescript draft article, 'One policy for France but another for Ireland', contrasting the threats of renewed war from British ministers with the tenor of a speech by Lord Curzon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to the United Wards Club of London, concerning the promotion of world peace through international cooperation, and reassuring France that the great powers would not tolerate the reappearance in Europe of any power that threatened world peace.

P80/224 November 1921

4pp

Annotated draft article, 'President Harding's speech—a statement of Ireland's case', in which Gallagher praises an address on the sanctity of national rights by the US President to the Washington Disarmament and Pacific Conference, as an eloquent exposition of Ireland's position in her struggle for liberty and justice.

P80/225 September–October 1921

23pp

Handwritten and annotated typescript drafts of a series of articles entitled 'The Partition of Ireland', describing meetings between de Valera, other members of the Cabinet, and nationalist deputations from Tyrone, Fermanagh, Antrim, and Belfast, protesting against their exclusion from an all-Ireland Parliament and pledging allegiance to Dáil Éireann. Included are copies of the Antrim and Belfast petitions.

P80/226 [September] 1921

5pp

Press cuttings and draft article, 'British connivance at Orange pogroms', containing examples of the involvement of the Ulster Special Constabulary and of British troops in attacks by Orange mobs on Catholics, as cited in statements issued by Commandant [Eoin] O'Duffy, Chief IRA Liaison Officer for Northern Ireland.

P80/227 1921

18pp

Handwritten draft entitled 'What British Government means to the minority in Ulster—the organisation and encouragement of civil war'. Chronicles the Belfast and Derry pogroms and lists the atrocities committed by Orange mobs against Catholics, June 1920–July 1921, 'the outcome of a policy deliberately pursued by the British Government in order to foster religious hatred and internecine strife in Ireland, thus making British domination the more easy to sustain'.

P80/228 [1921]

8pp

Handwritten and annotated typescript draft entitled 'The reorganisation of the Carsonite Volunteers'. Depicts the recently announced remobilisation of the Ulster Volunteers as yet another British ploy to abort an Irish settlement.

P80/229 November 1921

28pp

Annotated typescript drafts of a series of articles concerning the provenance and implications of a secret circular containing detailed instructions for the raising of an exclusively loyalist army to resist any unwelcome settlement arrived at by the Peace Conference, issued by Lieutenant Colonel Wickham, Divisional Commissioner of Constabulary, on 9 November, to the principal army and constabulary officers in North–East Ulster. Includes amended typescript copies of two letters from Professor Eoin MacNeill, TD for Derry City and the National University of Ireland, to de Valera, attributing responsibility for the 'secret circular' to the British Government, and accusing her Ministers of fomenting sectarian strife in Ireland.

P80/230 October 1921

33pp

Handwritten drafts of a series, 'Religious toleration in Republican Ireland', denouncing British Government representation of the unrest as a sectarian war instigated by the Catholics, with the British as disinterested peace makers. Included are copy extracts from letters and statements of Southern Protestants paying tribute to the religious tolerance in Republican areas and attesting to the harmonious co-existence of the two communities.

P80/231 November 1921

3pp

Handwritten draft article drawing attention to the reports of Crown Forces brutality, heard during malicious injury claims before Castlebar and Ballinrobe Quarter Sessions in late October.

P80/232 November 1921

13pp

Annotated typescript draft entitled 'Exaggerated awards in Ireland—a contrast in compensation cases'. Refutes an allegation by Sir Hamar Greenwood, Irish Chief Secretary, in the House of Commons, 31 October 1921, that the compensation awarded to those who had suffered injury or loss of property was excessive. Claims instead that awards made to the constabulary and British troops were excessive and contrasts a number of cases. Includes a handwritten list of comparative damages awarded between April 1920 and March 1921.

P80/233 29 October 1921

4pp

Annotated typescript draft tributes to the work of the American Committee for Relief in Ireland, on the occasion of the departure of two Committee members, Judge Campbell and Mr J J Pulleyn, from Ireland. Includes letter of thanks from the Irish plenipotentiaries in London to Campbell and Pulleyn.

P80/234 November 1921

4pp

Annotated typescript draft entitled 'The Sinn Féin Organisation – its relationship to Dáil Éireann', summarising the proceedings of the Sinn Féin Ard Fheis, held in Dublin, 27–28 October, and stressing the Party's status as a purely political organisation with neither executive nor administrative authority.

2 items
Notebook containing extracts from Richard Barry O'Brien, A Hundred Years of Irish History (London, 1911), and John Mitchel, The History of Ireland from the Treaty of Limerick to the Present Time (Glasgow, 1869) detailing flagrant and continual breaches by England of her treaties and promises to Ireland from the 1691 Treaty of Limerick to the abandonment of Gladstone's 1893 Home Rule Bill.
- P80/241 June 1921
23pp
Typescript copy of a memorandum in seven parts from Maurice Moore, late Colonel Commanding 1 Connaught Rangers, to General Jan Smuts, South African Prime Minister, attending the Imperial Conference in London, June 1921, appealing to him to join in an attempt to secure an honourable peace for Ireland. Includes a brief sketch of the historical and constitutional background to the Irish crisis, a review of the War of Independence, a detailed analysis of the English and Irish methods of warfare, and an outline of his peace proposals.
- P80/242 [copy made 1921]
4pp
Typescript extracts from a speech by Charles Fox, Foreign

- P60/242 Secretary, in the House of Commons, 17 May 1782, conceding to the demands of the Irish Parliament for legislative independence.
- P80/243 [1921]
11pp
Handwritten and typescript copies of the Platt Amendment, the 1901 Cuban–American treaty which defined the conditions under which the United States was willing to end the military occupation of Cuba which followed the Spanish–American war of 1898; and conceded to the US the right to intervene in Cuba for the preservation of orderly government or of Cuban independence; with an accompanying sketch of events leading up to the Boer Wars fought between Great Britain and the two South African Republics, Transvaal and the Orange Free State.
- P80/244 [1921]
6pp
Typewritten copy of a statement by Amos Pinchot entitled ‘The inside of the Irish Crisis’, arguing that Lloyd George’s peace terms offered Ireland insufficient freedom and calling upon those Americans who favoured good Anglo–American relations to denounce the proposals.
- P80/245 [copy made 1921]
28pp
Typescript copy of a two-part article by F Gamboa, ‘Sinn Féin and its pursuit’ and ‘Sinn Féin and its aim’, Mexican Review of International Law vol 2 no 4 (December 1920), forwarded by the Irish Diplomatic Mission, Washington, and marked ‘very poor translation’ and ‘to be sent to the President’.
- P80/246 22 November 1921

P80/247 February–December 1921

44 items

Handwritten and typescript copies of songs, ballads and short stories submitted mainly by Michael Scot and Frank M Gormley to Publicity. Included are poetic tributes by Countess Markiewicz to Kevin Barry and the Irish Volunteers; copy letter from FitzGerald to Miss Goodfellow informing her that two of her ballads were being circulated nationally through the Army and Cumann na mBan; and letter from Scot to FitzGerald giving him leave to edit 'The Ballad of Bidy O Loughlin' as he wished.

2.1.3.4 Printed matter

P80/248 27 December 1920

8pp

Pamphlet issued by the Peace with Ireland Council entitled A Report on the Irish Situation, consisting of a letter from Lieutenant General Sir Henry Lawson to the Council's chairman, Lord Henry Cavendish Bentinck MP, reporting on his investigations in Ireland on behalf of the Council, into reprisals, the position of Sinn Féin, and the possibility of peace by agreement.

P80/249 [December] 1920

4pp

Leaflet entitled The Auxiliary Police, containing an account by R C Gray, former English civil resident in Killaloe, County Clare, of the atrocities committed by Crown Forces in Clare between August and November 1920.

P80/250 [1921]

Incomplete, 2pp

Pages from a handbill circulated by the Irish Bulletin, containing printed extracts from the Manchester Guardian and The Leader

P80/250 concerning the activities of the Republican police and the skill and initiative shown by the Sinn Féin Government in reorganising the Irish industrial and commercial sectors.

P80/251 [1921]

2pp

Typewritten list of Republican publications, issued by the Benjamin Franklin Bureau.

2.1.3.5 Press releases and surveys

P80/252 June–December 1921

23 items

Handwritten and typescript drafts and typescript copies of statements issued by the Publicity Department mainly containing repudiations of misleading press reports; directives to local authorities; accounts of breaches of the Truce and outrages committed by the British; and announcements concerning meetings of the Dáil Ministry, the appointment of officials and the boycott of British goods. Included are rejections of reports by the London Daily Chronicle and the Press Association that Sinn Féin had imposed conscription and had ordered Irishmen living in England not to participate in the Census; copy extract from the minutes of the Kilrush Guardians concerning the refusal of the British Army to reimburse them for occupying the workhouse; statement by Liam Lynch, O/C Cork No 2 Brigade, denying that four men sentenced to death for raiding Mallow Military Barracks in September 1920 had participated in the attack; and a draft directive to local authorities ordering the establishment of anti-profiteering committees to counter excessive profiteering by local traders.

P80/253 11 October–4 December 1921

15 items

Typescript copies of official press communiqués, issued through Publicity, mainly announcing that meetings of the Peace Conference on Ireland and of committees of the conference had taken place. Included are statements from FitzGerald accusing the British of breaking an agreement that there would be no

P80/253 contact with the press other than by agreed communiqués; and repudiating a claim by Sir James Craig that the Northern Ireland representatives would be allowed to attend the Conference if and when Ulster interests were discussed.

25 items

Typescript copies of daily surveys of British press coverage of the negotiations between the Irish and British at the London Peace Conference, and between the British and the Northern Ireland Cabinet concerning the status of Ulster within an Irish settlement. Included are reviews of press comment on the Northern Cabinet's rejection of the British compromise offer of guaranteed autonomy for Ulster within an all-Ireland parliament; and the probable resignation of Lloyd George and the dissolution of Parliament were the Conference of National Unionist Associations in Liverpool to denounce the Government's policy of attempting to reach a settlement by offering mutual concessions to North and South; and the Conference's eventual endorsement of continued negotiations.

2.2 TREATY AND REPUBLICAN SPLIT

2.2.1 Correspondence

P80/255 December 1921 [–1922]

6 items

A E [George Russel], editor, the Irish Statesman, to FitzGerald, enclosing a letter from a Belfast linen manufacturer, J V Williams, hinting at strong support in Unionist circles for an all-Ireland parliament and expressing the hope that this information would strengthen the hands of moderates in the Dáil in the Treaty debates. Russell conveys a suggestion from Sir Philip Hansen, Board of Works, that the Provisional Government occupy Dublin Castle and establish the Dáil in St Patrick's Hall, seeks permission for two well-connected American visitors to visit the Dáil, and introduces individuals who wish to be of service to the Government.

P80/256 13 December 1921–16 March 1922

76 items

Letters and telegrams to FitzGerald and Arthur Griffith, congratulating them on the conclusion of a treaty with Britain, calling on the Dáil to ratify it, and expressing support for the Provisional Government. Included are resolutions and messages of support from local authorities, Sinn Féin Comhairle Ceanntair, farming associations, branches of the Irish Self-Determination League of Great Britain, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

P80/257 5 January 1922

2pp

Gladys Hynes, London, to FitzGerald, discussing the Treaty debates in the Dáil. 'I wonder if you were expecting all this uproar and division of opinion ... one feels an almost personal animosity between Griffith and de Valera ... all the same I suppose I should vote for it, if I had a vote to give'.

P80/258 13 January 1922

2pp

Eoin MacNeill [Ceann Comhairle], to FitzGerald, discussing strategy during the Treaty debates. 'Deputies who are against the will of their constituents should be called on to resign—publicly, insistently, repeatedly'.

P80/259 21 February 1922

13pp

Joseph O'Brien, President, Second Congressional District, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, Springfield, Massachusetts, to Arthur Griffith, suggesting that a plain statement by those in authority as to the actual issue between the pro and anti-Treatyites would clarify the issue for Americans and help secure their support for the Government. He encloses copies of letter to Thomas W Lyons, National Secretary, AARIR, in which he criticises attempts by the Executive to mobilise the AARIR in support of de Valera; and to the Springfield Council, AARIR, stating that the Association was bound by law to accept the decisions of the Dáil and recognise the Provisional Government.

P80/260 16 March 1922

Handwritten letter from Muiris Ó Morotha, Imperial Hotel, Castlebar, describing the political situation in the Mayo-Galway area in the run up to the June election. States that while most voters were pro-Treaty, they were frightened by the intimidatory tactics of the Republican police who were wholly under the control of P J Rutledge. Details instances of such intimidation, expresses fears that the police would occupy ballot booths or seize boxes, and asks if it would be possible to despatch a police squad, not answerable to Rutledge, to the area.

P80/261 6 March 1922

23pp

George Gavan Duffy, Minister for Foreign Affairs, to FitzGerald, enclosing a copy of a letter and enclosures from Frank Egan, the Government's representative in Chile. Egan describes the favourable press coverage accorded visits by a Committee of the Irish Colony in Chile to the proprietors and editors of the national press to thank the Chilean people for their moral support during the Irish struggle and encloses relevant press cuttings. Also included are a translation of a press interview with Egan in the immediate wake of the conclusion of the Anglo-Irish Treaty; letter from the Committee of the Irish Colony pledging support for the Treaty and welcoming the appointment of Griffith as President; and souvenir edition of The American World, 16 April 1921, in honour of the 1916 Rising.

P80/262 March 1922

3pp

Telegram from Ambrose Boylan, President, Sons of St Patrick, Albany, New York, to Griffith, requesting a message for their St Patrick's Day banquet in honour of Martin Glynn, former Governor of New York. Handwritten draft of the requested message.

P80/263 9 February 1922

3pp

John Graham, Cleveland, Ohio, editor of The Irish Vindicator, to Griffith, welcoming the Treaty. 'The only class in America opposed to the settlement are the ex-democratic office holders who have been on [Harry] Boland's payroll here for the past year and who

P80/263 were our bitterest enemies during the war'. Describes the united nature of the Irish-American organisation found by de Valera when he came to the US and the disunity created by him, mentions current anti-Treaty activity, and promises economic assistance for reconstruction.

P80/264 24 March 1922

2pp

George Gavan Duffy to FitzGerald, requesting publication of the appointment and departure for New York of Denis McCullough, Belfast Sinn Féin, as a Special Commissioner to counteract the disinformation campaign of Field-Marshal Sir Henry Wilson and reveal the truth about North-East Ulster; suggested form of announcement enclosed.

P80/265 13 April 1922

7pp

Michael Collins to FitzGerald, enclosing copies of two reports, filed by W H Bretherton, Dublin correspondent of the Morning Post, portions of which are 'very objectionable'. Collins requests that Bretherton be interviewed and a report made.

P80/266 11 May 1922

12pp

Michael Hayes, Minister for Education, to FitzGerald, forwarding a letter from W F Butler, Intermediate Education Board for Ireland, suggesting that an enclosed article by him, 'The Rejected peace. A lesson from Irish history', might be of use for propaganda purposes. The article deals with the 1646 treaty between King Charles and the confederate Catholics, and Butler finds the parallel with the contemporary situation 'curious, not to say depressing'.

2.2.2 Propaganda

2.2.2.1 Press releases

P80/267 11 February–20 April 1922

14pp

Press releases issued by the Publicity Department announcing the receipt by President Griffith of letters, telegrams and resolutions approving the ratification of the Treaty. Included are copies of messages of congratulation from the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, and Joseph O'Brien, President, Second Congressional District, AARIR, Springfield, Massachusetts, with extracts from a letter from O'Brien to the AARIR's National Secretary, Thomas Lyons, deploring the attempt of the National Executive to stampede the organisation into supporting de Valera and the anti-Treatyites.

P80/268 10 February–21 June 1922

31 items

Copies of press releases issued by the Publicity Department mainly relating to negotiations between the pro and anti-Treaty factions of the Army, and Government appointments and the continued persecution of nationalists in Northern Ireland. Includes a list of outrages committed by the Special Constabulary in County Fermanagh between August 1921 and March 1922; a list of the barracks vacated by the British and occupied by Irish troops; notification of the appointment of Professor T A Smiddy as Envoy to the US; St Patrick's Day greetings to Irish America and an attack on the anti-Treatyite, the Rev Michael O'Flannagan.

2.2.2.2 Press cuttings

P80/269 29 December 1921–19 January 1922

38 items

Cuttings from French, Swiss, Belgian, and Egyptian newspapers mainly concerning the ratification of the Treaty and the subsequent Republican split. Includes a profile of Arthur Griffith from Le Journal du Caire (31 October 1921) and a report on the evacuation of British troops in Le Matin (13 January 1922).

- P80/270 February 1922

2.2.2.3.2 Articles and pamphlets

- P80/274 20 May 1922
1p
Typescript copy article ridiculing Robert Barton's position. 'First he signed the Treaty. Then he voted for its acceptance by Dáil Éireann, and since, he has been doing everything he can ... to P80/274 smash the Treaty and to stultify the action of Dáil Éireann in approving the Treaty'. Annotated by Michael Collins. 'May be useful for a paragraph in Free State or Young Ireland or for leaflet'.

P80/275 [1922]

1p

Lines of doggerel entitled 'Motto for all true di Valerians'.
'If de Valera say 'It's so!
It HAS TO BE SO, even though
It is NOT so, for you must know
If HE says SO IT MUST BE SO!
(So there you are and now you know-ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay, etc)'.

P80/276 [1922]

6pp

Handwritten and typescript copy article by FitzGerald entitled 'The new weapon and the work'. States that while the Treaty had not granted Ireland untrammelled independence, it allowed her the power to achieve that independence.

P80/277 [1922]

3pp

Incomplete typescript article analysing and defending Article 4 of the Treaty.

P80/278 [1922]

2pp

Typescript article by I L Hammond, Manchester Guardian, advising the Government to frame the forthcoming Pact Election in such a way as to distinguish between the separate issues of the Treaty and the Constitution.

P80/279 26 April 1922

12pp

Pamphlet containing a statement issued by Cardinal Logue and the Irish hierarchy on the present condition of the country. They deplore the unconstitutional policy of certain leaders, state that the Army, or any part of it, has no right to declare itself independent of all civil authority, and appeal to those connected with the military revolt to desist and allow the forthcoming election to proceed without violence.

P80/280 1922

8pp

The Treaty and the original Document No 2. Pamphlet setting out for comparison clauses in the Treaty and the original Document No 2, drawn up by de Valera before signing of the Treaty.

2.3 CIVIL WAR

2.3.1 Censorship and relations with the press

P80/281 7 February 1922–27 January 1923

16 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald, H Moore and Sean Lester, managing and new editors of the Freeman's Journal, concerning the settlement of a bill for advertising in the paper in 1920; Moore's request on behalf of the Philadelphia Public Ledger that Richard Mulcahy, Minister for Defence, provide material for a series of articles on the formation, achievements and future development of the National Army; and a suggestions that the South-Western Command provide press facilities to expedite reports from that area. Includes a copy of a telegram from Dominic Hales, Irish Consul, Genoa, to the Journal, protesting at the execution of Rory O'Connor, Liam Mellows, Joe McKelvey, and Dick Barrett, in reprisal for the murder of his brother, Sean Hales TD; and copies of letters sent by the IRA to the paper forbidding the use of the term Anti-Treaty and repudiating a leading article in the paper calling on the anti-Treatyites to accept the result of the June elections.

P20/282 21 July 1922–8 February 1923

16 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Commandant General Piaras Béaslaí, Director of Army Publicity, relating to newspaper censorship. Includes galley proof of a report on the escape of one hundred anti-Treatyites from Dundalk Gaol, submitted to Army Publicity by the Evening Telegraph; letter from Charlotte Despard to the Cork Examiner, protesting against the detention of Annie McSwiney; letter from C P Scott, editor of the Manchester Guardian, to President Griffith, requesting an explanation for the stoppage of four editions; reply from Béaslaí stating that the excluded issues had contained military information not passed by the censor; handwritten and copy typescript letter from the editor, Waterford News, concerning the excesses of the local military censor; copy letter from FitzGerald to Captain Smith, Army Publicity, impressing upon him the desirability of the Army rather than the Government being seen to be responsible for the suppression of press reports; and copy letter from FitzGerald to P J Hooper, editor, Freeman's Journal, informing him that responsibility for refusing permission to publish documents of an undesirable nature rested with Army Publicity.

P80/283 25,26 July 1922

2 items

Copy letter from FitzGerald to Collins suggesting that, unless there were military reasons against it, censorship be relaxed almost to vanishing point. Reply from Collins, concurring. 'At all times the censorship was too strict for my liking. It is unquestionably a fact that the average reader of the newspaper discounts to an undue extent censored news, and in any case we have the situation so well in hand now from the public and military point of view that the newspapers themselves may be trusted to do what is right, if only they are spoken to occasionally.'

P80/284 July 1922

2 items

Staff Captain Hugh G Smith, Army Publicity Department, to FitzGerald, suggesting on behalf of the Commander in Chief that the enclosed copy directive from Colonel M W Taylor, RUC Headquarters, Belfast, to the I[nspector] G[eneral], RUC, concerning the suppression of demonstrations and the arrest of persons obstructing policemen in the execution of their duty, might usefully provide the foundation for a Freeman's Journal leader on some suitable occasion.

P80/285 September 1922

16 items

Material relating to the censorship of evidence given at the inquest into the death of Patrick Mannion, an anti-Treaty Commandant killed in an encounter with National Army personnel in Dublin, 17 September 1922. Included are copies of Army Intelligence reports on the incident; copies of press accounts of the inquest and the jury's verdict of wilful murder; copies of letters from Dorothy MacArdle and George Noble, Count Plunkett, to the Irish Independent, deploring the Government's suppression of evidence given at the inquest; and handwritten and copy typescript memoranda by Piaras Béaslaí, explaining that he had not had the evidence suppressed but had, in view of the 'misleading and garbled' report on the inquest submitted by the Freeman's Journal, ordered the press to summarise the proceedings in a brief paragraph.

P80/286 14–20 August 1922

9 items

Letter from the outgoing Minister for Foreign Affairs, George Gavan Duffy, to FitzGerald, requesting that he return his letter to the press concerning his resignation; copy reply from FitzGerald, complying and stating that the Government would not prevent publication; acknowledgement by Gavan Duffy welcoming the decision; copy of the letter citing the Government's suppression of the Dáil Courts as the reason for his resignation; press cutting of the letter; draft handwritten and typescript Government response, accusing Gavan Duffy of violating the ordinary rule of Cabinet confidence, charging him with presenting an inaccurate and partial account of the events, and warning the public against being misled by such statements until such time as the Cabinet rendered a full and proper account of the matter; and copies of two anonymous letters sent by the Publicity Department to Irish newspapers criticising Gavan Duffy's letter and his 'aspersions upon the Government'.

P80/287 September 1922

3 items

SCD, 'an Irish girl whose heart is still in Ireland', to President Cosgrave, enclosing an editorial cutting from an American newspaper, criticising Muriel MacSwiney's violent opposition to the Provisional Government. - P80/287 Republicans, in which she denounced Michael Collins.
- P80/289 February 1923
3 items
Cosgrave to FitzGerald, enclosing a letter from Lord Beaverbrook, proprietor of the Sunday Express, informing Cosgrave that the Express had recently been offered exclusive information on de Valera's proposals for a truce. Beaverbrook suggests that Cosgrave contact A Beverly Baxter, the acting editor of the paper, for further information; and introduces the new Dublin correspondent of the Express. Copy reply from Cosgrave thanking Beaverbrook for the information and informing him that the matter was under investigation.
- P80/290 [1923]
1p
Copy of a letter from Sean MacCaoilte, member of the Commission appointed on behalf of the Provisional Government, to the editor of the New York American, taking issue with a leader in the paper entitled 'Parties in Ireland'. States that de Valera's policy is not to create a Republican Party to work within the Free State Parliament but to prevent the establishment of that Parliament.
- P80/291 [1923]
4pp
Copy of a letter from Joseph O'Brien, [President, Springfield, AARIR], to the editor of the Springfield News, repudiating a series of claims in relation to Ireland made by a Mr P Hegarty, and criticising de Valera and his supporters.
- P80/292 [1923]

P80/304 15 November 1922

2pp

Copy of a statement issued by IRA GHQ prior to Childers trial; denigrates the charges and insinuations against him. 'Erskine Childers is no more an Englishman than was Pádraig Pearse or Thomas Davis'.

P80/305 30 November 1922

4pp

[Sean Lester] to the editor of the Freeman's Journal, enclosing for publication a copy of a statement made by Childers in Portobello Barracks prior to his sentencing and execution, 19 November 1922, protesting against the prejudicial and unproven allegations made against him by Kevin O'Higgins, Minister for Home Affairs, in Dáil Éireann, while he was awaiting and undergoing trial in camera.

- P80/306 30 November 1922
4pp
Irish Independent [to the Publicity Department], submitting a copy of Childers' statement [for approval by the censor?]
- P80/307 [1922]
2pp
Typewritten article entitled 'Sinister Activities of Major Erskine Childers DSO', depicting Childers as an agent of British imperialism bent on bankrupting Ireland by crippling her transport and trade infrastructure, and destroying her lines of communication with the world at large, i.e. the transatlantic cable stations on the Irish coast.
- P80/308 [1922]
1p
Typescript extracts from Erskine Childers, In the ranks of the CIV [City of London Imperial Volunteers], describing his Boer War activities. Extracts are intended to show Childers' jingoism, his condescension towards the Irish soldiers fighting in South Africa, and the brutality and avarice of British forces.
- P80/309 [1922]
1p
Doggerel entitled 'The Er-Skin & the Pig-One of Erskine's Little Wars', satirising Childers activities with the City of London Imperial Volunteers during the Boer War.

2.3.4 Ernie O'Malley

P80/311 24 August 1922

4pp

Ernie O'Malley, Officer Commanding, Northern and Eastern Command, to P Hooper, editor, Irish Independent, enclosing for publication a letter commenting critically upon the newspaper's inconsistent attitudes towards the whipping of prisoners by the Northern Ireland Government, and the Provisional Government's treatment of their prisoners; accuses the paper of helping to precipitate the Civil War by misrepresenting the issue and falsifying and suppressing the truth.

P80/312 [1922]

6pp

Handwritten letter on The Literary Agency notepaper, and typescript letter on Treaty Election Committee notepaper, both in reply to a letter from Ernie O'Malley to the Irish Independent, rejecting O'Malley's claims that the anti-Treatyites are engaged in a just and holy war and are not indulging in barbaric excesses; further typescript anonymous letter attacking O'Malley, sent to the Independent by Cummins of the Publicity Department.

P80/313 15-22 May 1923

6 items

Mrs Marion K O'Malley, St Kevin's, Iona Drive, drawing FitzGerald's attention to the transfer of her severely injured son, Ernie, wounded during his capture on 4 November, from the hospital wing to A wing Mountjoy, expressing fears that such treatment would kill him, and asking FitzGerald to enquire into the matter; draft handwritten reply from FitzGerald assuring her that her fears were groundless but promising to contact O'Malley's doctor; copy extract from an earlier letter from O'Malley to Miss O'Rahilly, noting the eagerness of his captors to see him return to health, '... but I will refuse to go out until I feel fit enough and also inclined to do so; this enemy Army Council will have to recognise that they are shooting a hospital patient' (29 January 1923); copy of a report by the Medical Officer, Mountjoy, detailing the rapid improvements in O'Malley's condition; copy letter from FitzGerald apprising Mrs O'Malley of her son's recovery; and reply thanking him but reiterating her fears. 'I feel it is only a matter of a short time for him and if I could only give him some real

P80/313 comforts, that is all I want' (22 May 1923).

2.3.5 Propaganda: publications, posters, and related matter

P80/314 [1923]

3pp

Publicity Department newsletter entitled Dublin Doings—Unedited Views of a Metropolitan Journalist. Claims that Liam Deasy's surrender and admission that the struggle had degenerated into a wretched vendetta had had a profound effect on the IRA rank and file; urges them to renounce violence and pursue constitutionalism; discusses the provisions of the Malicious Injuries Bill; announces the forthcoming publication by the Talbot Press of a book by the late Michael Collins, The Path to Freedom, 'a valuable exposition of the conditions that led to the signing of the Treaty and an able defence of the Treaty itself'.

P80/331 July 1922–February 1923

37 items

Letters from J H MacDonnell, Southampton Street, Strand, London, the Dáil Éireann solicitor in London, and Frank MacDonagh, the Publicity Department's London representative, mainly dealing with the establishment, production and distribution from the London office in 7 Chandos Street, of the London edition of the Irish Bulletin; monitoring British press comment on Ireland; and detailing the enquiries received concerning the military and political situation in Ireland, enlistment in the Irish Army and civil service, engineering contracts and industrial development schemes. Included are weekly analyses of British press reports on Ireland; British press cuttings on the Civil War, the Irish economy, Ireland's membership of the League of Nations, the appointment of the Irish High Commissioner to London and America's attitude to Ireland; notification by MacDonagh of the proposed visit to Ireland of Captain L Norrgran, Finnish Consul-General, with a view to promoting commercial relations between Ireland and Finland; and a report on a meeting organised by the Irish Self-Determination League of Great Britain at Bermondsey Town Hall, 21 January 1923, to celebrate the Declaration of Independence and the re-affirmation of the establishment of the Irish Republic.

2.3.6.2 Chairman of the Provisional Government/ President of the Executive Council

P80/332 May 1922–February 1923

6 items

[Michael Collins] to President Griffith enclosing a note from J[oseph] McG[rath, Minister for Labour] concerning allegations by Delia Larkin, published in a handbill, that representatives of the Government had canvassed the Governor of New York State against the release from prison of her brother, James Larkin; copy of the handbill and related material.

P80/333 20 October 1922

1p

Note to President Cosgrave, enquiring if he had any objection to Lloyd George's publication of a telegram from Cosgrave expressing appreciation of Lloyd George's message assuring the Irish Government of Britain's commitment to the Treaty. Annotated, assenting to publication.

P80/334 3 November 1922

2pp

M A Kelly, Director of Organisation, AARIR, New York District Headquarters, to President Cosgrave, enclosing a copy of a resolution protesting at the detention without trial of Republicans and calling upon the US President and Congress to investigate their maltreatment; annotated to FitzGerald requesting a suggestion for reply.

P80/335 21 December 1922

1p

Cosgrave to FitzGerald, reminding him that the Government had given a guarantee that there would be no publication or notice in the press about Heuston's release.

2.3.6.3 Army

P80/ 336 July 1922

4 items

FitzGerald to Collins, Commander in Chief, enclosing a copy of the 'Manifesto to the people of Ireland adopted at a conference of the available Deputies of the Republican Party'; reply from Collins requesting a more legible copy; further copy of the manifesto.

P80/337 1922

3pp

FitzGerald's copy of a letter from Collins to members of the Government, enclosing copies of two documents found on Sean T O'Kelly when arrested on 28 July 1922. Includes copy of a letter from Ernie O'Malley to O'Kelly requesting an outline of his courier system and a list of Collins' associates; and copy of a letter from Harry Boland to O'Kelly asking him to attend the forthcoming Clan na nGael convention in New York to raise funds, plan an American campaign and prevail upon the Clan to provide arms. Collins suggests that the two documents be given to the press exactly as they are. 'Good use can be made of these papers if they are written up in the proper way. The other day Poblacht na hÉireann accused prominent Army men of belonging to the IRB; they lauded de Valera and Boland for not having anything to do with Secret Societies. Now we see de Valera in his true light as being not only a Secret Society man but the maker of a Secret Society specially for his own purposes'.

P80/338 November 1922–March 1923

11 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Richard Mulcahy, mainly concerning anti-Treatyite activity. Included are copy letters from FitzGerald concerning the smuggling of large quantities of arms from England; Ben Briscoe's probable gun running in America; and the unauthorised unilateral action of an officer in the Adjutant-General's Department in permitting the publication, contrary to FitzGerald's instructions, of de Valera's reply to the neutral IRA. Also includes a copy of a letter from Sir Horace Plunkett's secretary requesting that he and Sir Horace's chauffeur be supplied with arms to protect their employer's home; a query from Mulcahy as to the suppression of The Republic; a copy of a letter from Miss H B Murray, Rathmines, to Mulcahy complaining of thefts during raids on her home by national troops and informing him of her intention to provide the Dublin and British press with an account of the events; and a copy of a letter, forwarded by Mulcahy, from David L Robinson, an anti-Treatyite, to [George] Gavan Duffy, asking him to enquire into the death of a captured colleague, John Galvin, and requesting that he take the National Army's practice of using prisoners as hostages up with the appropriate authorities. Mulcahy orders that the letter not be used without informing him.

P80/339 June 1923

12pp

Commandant Risteard OhEigeartaigh, Office of the Commander-in-Chief, to FitzGerald, concerning an anti-Treaty circular containing allegations about conditions in the North Dublin Union Internment Camp. Includes a copy of the circular, and copies of reports by Commandant T O'Neill, NDU Military Governor, and his medical staff detailing prison conditions with particular reference to hospital facilities, the prisoners' mutinous attitude, and the deteriorating sanitation arising from the refusal of the prisoners to scrub out.

P80/340 September 1922–March 1923

4 items

Diarmuid Ó hEigeartaigh, Director of Intelligence, to FitzGerald, enclosing items of possible propaganda value. Includes a copy of a captured report concerning the shooting of sheep by anti-Treatyites in County Donegal; and a copy of a letter from Mrs M Connolly to her son Joseph, detained in Newbridge Military barracks, berating him for associating with the murderers of Michael Collins.

P80/341 January 1922–January 1923

2.5.1 Correspondence

P80/371 January 1924

4 items

President Cosgrave to FitzGerald requesting information on recent publications that had expressed pro- or anti-Saorstát sentiments and enclosing an extract from a Ministry of Education memorandum suggesting that a competent writer be given access to information compiled by the North-East Boundary Bureau to write an exposé of the oppressive Belfast administration. 'See the use made of Dublin Castle information in [Professor W] Alison Phillips work [The Revolution in Ireland, Longman, London 1923] which is written to hamper the Saorstát and especially to back up Partition'. Reply from Sean Lester enclosing a list of recent publications relating to Ireland with a commentary as to their content and attitude towards the Free State.

P80/372 January–December 1924

27 items

Letters and memoranda from Sean Lester to FitzGerald, mainly with regard to the Boundary issue and the provision of press coverage favourable to the Government. Advises that the Army recruiting campaign be postponed in the light of the failure of the Boundary Conference; recommends that efforts be made to pressurise England on the Boundary issue by arousing American opinion; suggests that the Government exploit the rumoured dissatisfaction among Ulster farmers at the failure of the Northern Government to provide land purchase terms equal to those available to Free State farmers under the 1923 Land Act; asks that advance copies of Ministerial speeches introducing constructive bills in the Dáil be made available to the press; suggests that FitzGerald meet political correspondents once a fortnight; proposes that a conference of provincial newspaper editors be held under Government auspices; and suggests the nomination of Dr Lombard Murphy, proprietor of the Irish Independent, as a senate candidate in the hope that he would then take a keener interest in the paper's unhelpful editorial policy and reportage. He encloses press cuttings relating to the visit of a deputation of British MPs to Northern Ireland; a letter from Michael MacWhite, Irish representative in Geneva, seeking permission to reply to a critical article on Ireland in Le Monde; and a rough analysis of voting in the five by-elections in November 1924 in comparison with the 1923 general election.

3.3 Relations with the Vatican

P80/410 23 February–27 July 1922

7pp

Typescript extracts from correspondence between George Gavan Duffy, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and Count O'Byrne, Irish representative in Italy, concerning O'Byrne's efforts to secure eventual Vatican recognition of the Irish Government and gain a Papal audience as the Provisional Government's official representative. O'Byrne describes his meetings with Vatican officials; their queries concerning his credentials; objections to his acting as a representative both to the Vatican and the Quirinal; and their promises of recognition 'once a government was established by the will of the Irish people and England raised no objection to it'. He analyses the refusal to grant him a Papal audience in his official capacity. 'They are apparently afraid to see anybody who might remind them of the persecution of the Catholics in Ulster ... Delicate negotiations are being carried out in London I believe, about Palestine and they are afraid to do anything to offend the British Government'.

P80/411 24 April 1923

2 items

Handwritten and copy typescript memorandum from C P Curran [Vice Rector, Irish College, Rome], to FitzGerald, on relations between the Holy See and Ireland. States that the Vatican's Irish policy was conditioned by the Anglophile, anti-Irish legacy of Leo XIII, the pervasive anti-Irish influence of the English ecclesiastical and secular communities in Rome, and the Vatican's overwhelming desire to establish diplomatic representation in Britain and consequent reluctance to criticise English policy on Ireland. He concludes that Monsignor Luzio had been appointed as Papal Envoy to Ireland to 'secure through Dublin a camouflaged agent at the Court of St James. Through such an agent Irish politico-ecclesiastical officers would be sought to be controlled by anti-Irish ecclesiastics and politicians in London'. He stresses the importance of having Irish representation in Rome, appointing competent personnel to the Curia and Congregation, securing a Cardinalate for Dublin, and fostering links with political groups such as the Partito Popolare and the Cioventu Cattolica Associations.

P80/412 26 April 1923

5 items

Handwritten draft and typescript copies of a letter in French from Arthur Griffith to Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, formally presenting Desmond FitzGerald, Minister for External Affairs.

P80/413 [May 1923]

6pp

Typescript account by Joseph Walshe, Secretary of the Department of External Affairs, of FitzGerald's visit to Rome, 29 April–2 May 1923. He describes the Minister's interviews accompanied by Marquis MacSwiney of Mashanaglas, with Monsignor Pazzardo, Secretary to the Cardinal Secretary of State, and his conveyance of the Government's gratitude for the Vatican's prompt recall of Monsignor Luzio; discussions with Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, concerning Luzio's mission, Con Murphy's visit to Rome and his subsequent imprisonment in Ireland; an audience with the Pope; a visit to the Vatican Library; a meeting with Signor Contanini, Permanent Director of Foreign Affairs, who spoke of a future Irish-Italian trade connection; and a courtesy call on Theo Russell, British Minister to the Holy See.

P80/414 8 May–30 July 1923

9 items

Handwritten letters from Marquis MacSwiney of Mashanaglas to FitzGerald, mainly reporting the positive reactions to FitzGerald's diplomatic mission to Rome. He describes the efforts of the recalled Papal delegate, Monsignor Luzio, to assume responsibility for the Irish peace process; speculation as to the involvement of Irish and American republican lobbies and English ecclesiastics in Rome in the appointment of Luzio; deplores the paucity of Irish press coverage of Rome affairs; refers to the arrest in Genoa and subsequent release of Sean Hales, the former Irish Consul and self-styled Republican Representative in Italy; and recounts conversations with Vatican dignitaries concerning conditions in Ireland, and forthcoming elections, Anglo-Irish relations, and the position that the Free State would henceforth occupy in the British Commonwealth, the League of Nations, and 'amongst the Great Catholic nations of the world'.

3.4 Saorstát Representation Abroad

P80/415 [1923]

1p

Handwritten note from Cosgrave to FitzGerald concerning the appointment and activities of Government representatives abroad. 'I don't know whether [James MacNeill] the High Com[missioner in London] is aware of the position of these Reps abroad. If not you will have to consider going over and personally seeing [the] Duke [of Devonshire, Secretary of State for the Colonies] and giving High Com. all the information at your disposal. This is a business which requires careful handling. These Reps are generally poor stuff and while our national position must be safeguarded, we can't have them making a mess of things'.

P80/416 [post 1926]

5pp

Copy typescript memorandum from the Department of External Affairs outlining proposals for the reorganisation and expansion of the generally inadequate system of Saorstát representation abroad, as a means of enhancing the Free State's status as an independent state 'in no way subservient to Great Britain'. Includes rough estimate of the cost of reorganising the legations and consulates in Berlin, Paris, Geneva, Ottawa, New York and Washington'.

P80/417 [1922-3]

5pp

Incomplete typescript memorandum by [Sean Murphy, former Irish Envoy in Paris?], in which he emphasises the need to establish suitable premises for the Irish Legation, the lack of which had prevented 'the Envoy taking up his proper position in French society and exercising the influence he ought to possess in diplomatic circles'. He condemns as prejudicial to the national interest the rumoured decision to close the legation and replace it with a smaller, more economical Bureau of Information. Notes that the attendance of representatives of the French President and Premier at the Requiem Mass in Paris for Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins had signified 'a deliberate intention of opening relations with Ireland ... The hand of Ministerial France is held out to Ireland but there is no Envoy to take it'.

P80/418 [1922-3]

3pp

Provisional memorandum detailing the functions of consuls, their importance to the national interest, and the Constitutional right of the Free State to appoint them.

P80/420 May 1922–February 1927

30 items

Correspondence with William Craig–Martin, an insurance broker based in Shanghai, mainly concerning his lobbying for and activities as the Free State honorary representative in China. Included are exchanges concerning the provision of Russian visas for Craig–Martin and his wife; the inability of the Free State representatives abroad to issue passports; the deteriorating political situation in China and the subsequent transfer of Craig–Martin’s business and Consular Office to Peking. He requests a diplomatic passport to ensure him a seat on the diplomatic train in the event of an evacuation from Peking and demands promotion to the rank of Commissioner to allow him direct access to the Peking Government. Included are six photographs of Craig–Martin’s offices and staff.

P80/421 January–March 1923

10 items

US and Canadian press cuttings recording a visit to Canada by T A Smiddy, Irish Commissioner to Washington; an address by Smiddy to the American-Irish Historical Society; and the release of James Larkin from a New York prison.

P80/422 22 December 1923

5pp

T A Smiddy, Irish Envoy to Washington, to FitzGerald enclosing a report arising from a suggestion by A.E. [George Russell] and [Thomas] Johnston that the Free State conclude a reciprocal commercial treaty with the USA. Advises that US policy was opposed to reciprocal and preferential trade agreements and encloses a copy of a previous letter to this effect to George Gavan Duffy, former Minister of Foreign Affairs (24 June 1922).

P80/423 25 June 1924

2pp

Typescript copy letter from FitzGerald to Smiddy informing him that the British had instructed their Washington Ambassador to request that the US President receive a Minister Plenipotentiary on behalf of the Irish Free State; outlining his future role as the official channel of communication with the US Government for matters exclusively affecting the Free State; and providing instructions as to the nature of his relations with the British Ambassador.

P80/424 July–December 1924

7 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Senator N A Belcourt, Canadian High Commissioner in London, mainly concerning the appointment of Professor T A Smiddy as Irish Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Washington. FitzGerald outlines, at Belcourt's request, the proceedings surrounding the appointment, the terms and conditions of accreditation, and the costs involved. Includes a letter of introduction to the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Dublin and a letter thanking FitzGerald for having travelled to London to discuss representation at the Inter-Allied Conference.

P80/425 9 August 1923

3pp

Edmund Duggan [Minister without Portfolio] to FitzGerald, enclosing a copy of a letter from J H McDonnell, solicitor, London, complaining that although he had been appointed by George Gavan Duffy, former Minister for Foreign Affairs, as the Free State solicitor in London and had since represented, exclusively and at considerable personal and financial sacrifice, the Free State's interests, the Government had appointed another solicitor to their first English court case. He requests that Duggan clarify his status with the Dublin authorities.

3.5 Correspondence

3.5.1 President and Secretary of the Executive Council

P80/426 19 June 1923

2pp

Note from P[aul] B[anim], Secretary to the President, informing FitzGerald that the President wished to discuss with him and the Attorney-General, the enclosed report from the Daily Chronicle concerning the failure of the Free State Government to honour over eleven thousand war compensation claims worth thirty million pounds.

P80/427 December 1924–April 1925

5 items

Diarmuid Ó hEigeartaigh, Secretary to the Executive Council, to George McGrath, Comptroller and Auditor General, and Kathleen McKenna, Department of External Affairs, enquiring as to the whereabouts of Sir Roger Casement's last handwritten message to the Irish Brigade, purchased in 1921 at Erskine Childer's house by the Dáil authorities from Sergeant Major Keogh of the Irish Brigade. Handwritten replies from McGrath, stating that he had no information on the matter but warning that the message was unlikely to be in friendly hands, and from McKenna, speculating that Childer's wife had the document in question. Included are typescript copies in English and German of Casement's farewell address at Zossen to the Brigade; a schedule of Brigade papers, 1915–18; and a copy of a letter from Irish prisoners of war in Berlin refuting statements allegedly made to the British press by exchanged POWs concerning the formation of the Brigade and the purported attempt to organise an Irish Brigade within the German army (24 September 1915).

3.5.2 Home Affairs and Police

P80/428 9 August 1922

10pp

Ernest Bylthe, Acting-Minister for Home Affairs, to FitzGerald, enclosing a copy of his memorandum on Government policy concerning Northern Ireland. He notes that counter-productive military or economic pressure would not secure unification; recommends that all military operations in or against Northern Ireland be immediately terminated; and suggests that the Provisional Government accept the Treaty in full, recognise the Northern Government, and adopt a friendly and pacific policy toward the North-East, trusting that 'in the course of time national unification would come to be regarded as a wise and economical thing by the majority in the Six Counties ... There is of course the risk that the peaceful policy will not succeed. But it has a chance where the other has no chance. The unity of Ireland is of sufficient importance for us to take a chance in the hope of gaining it. The first move lies with us'.

P80/428

P80/429

November 1922–June 1923

4 items

P Ó Siochain, Assistant Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs, to FitzGerald enclosing documents relating to the transfer of Pettigo, County Donegal, to the Free State. Includes copies of correspondence between Einri Ó Frighill, Secretary, Home Affairs, and Eoin O'Duffy, Garda Commissioner, concerning the expulsion by the British of Civic Guards, sent to man a station there, prior to the British evacuation; copies of subsequent reports by Captain E MacNaghten, Free State Civil Administrator of Pettigo, detailing his generally successful efforts to maintain peace, promote goodwill and enhance the authority of the Government; handwritten and copy typescript letter from Kevin O'Higgins, Minister for Home Affairs, to Mac Naghten, applauding his endeavours but dismissing him as a result of his unfortunate tendency to resent all necessary Departmental checks; and a copy of MacNaghten's reply rejecting such accusation and requesting a meeting with the Cabinet on the matter.

P80/430

13 April 1923

2pp

FitzGerald to Kevin O'Higgins, Minister for Home Affairs, enclosing a copy of a telegram from Professor Timothy Smiddy, Irish Envoy at Washington, advising that Eoin O'Duffy, Garda Commissioner, attend a forthcoming International Police Conference in America.

P80/431 14 April 1923

1p

Kevin O'Higgins, Minister for Home Affairs, requesting that FitzGerald inform him if there were any position in his Ministry to which he would be willing to appoint Joe Lynch, a former Mountmellick TD.

P80/432 21–27 February 1923

3 items

Donnchadh Ua Ceallaigh, editor and manager, Iris an Garda, the official journal of the Civic Guard, requesting FitzGerald's opinion of the recent march past Government buildings for publication in the journal; draft pencilled commentary by FitzGerald praising the participants 'fine bearing'; and a letter from Ua Ceallaigh enclosing a copy of Iris an Garda [missing].

P80/433 3 April–24 September 1923

8 items

FitzGerald to General Eoin O'Duffy, Chief Commissioner, Civic Guards, forwarding applications for membership of the force and recommending the admission of James Mulcahy, ex RIC. Replies from the Commissioner's office drawing FitzGerald's attention to the Government's prohibition on the re-employment of former RIC and DMP members in the Garda Síochána.

P80/434 13 October 1923

7pp

Captain A S Ó Muireadhaigh, Criminal Investigation Department, Oriel House, Westland Row, to FitzGerald enclosing, on the orders of Major General J McGrath TD, Director General, CID, a copy of his report to McGrath on the activities of the CID from McGrath's appointment in February 1923.

3.5.3 Defence

P80/435 16–19 May 1925

4 items

Confidential letter from the Private Secretary to the Minister for Defence, to FitzGerald, returning a letter from George Lloyd Davies, North Wales [former MP], seeking information on behalf of his family as to the circumstances surrounding the death of Major Compton Smith [Royal Welsh Fusiliers, executed by the Cork No.1 Brigade]. The Private Secretary informs FitzGerald that despite exhaustive enquiries it has not been possible to obtain the required information; reassures him that investigations are ongoing and that relatives of the deceased will be contacted in the event of information becoming available; and encloses a copy letter to this effect sent to George Russell, Irish Statesman, with whom Mr Davies had also been in communication. Copy confidential letter from FitzGerald to Davies regretting that his enquiries had been fruitless, 'but you will understand that the attitude for and against the Treaty was largely dictated by IRA officers and in a district where the officer was anti-Treaty all the men followed him. The result is that we have no records covering that period in such areas. I have no doubt that as the Civil War recedes further into the background ... we will be able to get more information'.

P80/436 25 March–15 May 1926

2 items

Sean Lester, Department of External Affairs, to the Private Secretary to the Minister for Defence, enclosing copies of two letters from Professor T A Smiddy, Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington, describing lectures given by him in Chicago and Ohio and discussions with Canadian politicians on the subject of possible Canadian diplomatic representation at Washington.

P80/437 18 May 1927

2pp

Sean Lester to [P Hughes], Minister for Defence, enclosing a copy of a confidential letter from T A Smiddy, Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington, to FitzGerald, concerning Eamon de Valera's recent visit to America.

P80/439 21 February 1923

3pp

Thomas Gorman, Army Finance Officer, Ministry of Defence, to FitzGerald enclosing a statement outlining new rates of pay and allowances for officers commissioned under the Army Reorganisation Scheme.

3.5.4 Abbey Theatre and the Lane Pictures

P80/440 12 October 1922–1 April 1925

12 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald, Lennox Robinson, manager, and W B Yeats, director of the Abbey Theatre, concerning the Theatre's future. Includes a letter from Robinson enclosing a memorandum from the Abbey directors to the Provisional Government detailing the Theatre's precarious finances, arguing for State subsidisation, and calling for its recognition as the National Theatre. Robinson disagrees with the memorandum and advises the Government to build a State Theatre and maintain the Abbey as the Gaelic Theatre and possibly as a rehearsal theatre for the State Theatre. Copy letter from FitzGerald informing Robinson of a proposal to include a £1,000 annual subvention for the Abbey in the Estimates. Letter from W B Yeats to FitzGerald refusing to accept or request Robinson's resignation as a director and copy reply from FitzGerald reassuring him that the possibility was unlikely to arise.

P80/441 25–28 April 1927

3 items

Lady Gregory to FitzGerald, urging that a member of the Government make a statement in the Dáil reiterating the Government's hope that the British would carry out Sir Hugh Lane's acknowledged intention, and the Government's determination to accept nothing less than the indefinite loan of the whole collection. Notes that a public commitment by the City Commissioners to the construction of a gallery to accommodate the pictures would be helpful. Copy reply from FitzGerald assuring her that everything possible was being done but that no definite statement could be made; letter of thanks from Lady Gregory.

3.5.5 Routine correspondence

P80/442 20 October–9 November 1922

7 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Francis Hackett, writer and journalist, concerning Hackett's abortive attempt to secure an interview with President Cosgrave for American syndication, and his representation on behalf of his brother John, an applicant for the post of Consul in Spain.

P80/443 12 November 1922–6 July 1924

13 items

Letters, telegrams and enclosures from Chester Allan Arthur Junior, New York and Dublin, grandson of the 21st President of the United States, Chester Arthur (1881–84), to FitzGerald concerning Irish political affairs. He condemns the executions of Erskine Childers, Rory O'Connor and Liam Mellows, expresses strong disapproval of Ireland's membership of the League of Nations and the Government's mishandling of the Republican prisoners' hunger-strike. He disputes FitzGerald's assertion that Pearse would have accepted the Treaty; repudiates his contention that the majority of Republicans were motivated by self-interest; urges the Free State to establish direct trade links with the Continent as a means of securing recognition as an independent state; and praises the ideals and enthusiasm of the Italian Fascists. Includes copy reply by FitzGerald justifying the executions. 'In the position we are in we can have only one ideal and that is the continued existence of our country and our people. The fact that that existence is jeopardised forces us to take every step, no matter how ruthless it may be, to avert national extinction. It is, in a way, almost laughable to hear people talk as though we shot those men, who were our most intimate comrades merely because we like shooting them'. Also includes cuttings of Arthur's articles and letters on Irish affairs for the American press; concerning his successful action against the New York Times for alleging that he had publicly appealed for arms for the IRA; and a handwritten account by him of the shooting of a woman in Grafton Street by Free State soldiers.

Letter from a Chinese student, Ignatius Ging-K, Dalgan Park, Galway, to Dr Oliver St John Gogarty, asking him to enquire if he would be eligible for Irish citizenship, what steps he should take to obtain naturalisation, and whether the authorities would overlook the fact that he had lived in Ireland for only five of the seven years required.

P80/450 7 June 1924–2 October 1926

13 items

Routine correspondence between FitzGerald and O D Skelton, variously a Canadian delegate to the League of Nations and member of the Office of Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, mainly concerning matters of a general political nature, Skelton requests assistance in purchasing portraits of noted nineteenth century Irish nationalists; and encloses at FitzGerald's request copies of legislation and reports on the control and financing of hydro-electric schemes in Canada. FitzGerald enquires about Skelton's plans to visit Europe as he wishes to discuss Dominion affairs. He contends that Dominion Trade Representatives should have Consular status and seeks Canadian cooperation in amending at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, constitutional anomalies such as the status of Governors General, the issue of extra-territorial powers, and the unqualified right of Dominion Governments to be sole and direct advisers to the Crown, 'remnants of a previous state of affairs which are not consistent with the declared equality of the status of the States forming the British Commonwealth of Nations'.

P80/452 May 1925–August 1927

23 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Alice Stopford Green, 90 St Stephen's Green, Dublin, concerning the closure of Mount St Benedict, a Benedictine school in Gorey, County Wexford. Includes statements taken in reply to the charges by Dr Codd, Bishop of Ferns, that Dom J F Sweetman, Superior of Mount St Benedict, had defied the Bishops Pastoral of October 1922 and had organised and encouraged military activities against the Free State; letters from Mrs Green urging FitzGerald to take up the matter with other Ministers; letter from Eoin MacNeill, Minister for Education, expressing the opinion that the closure of Mount St Benedict would be a severe loss to Irish education; handwritten note from Patrick McGilligan to FitzGerald informing him that there was no hope of moving the President on the matter; statement of protest from Green and circular letter from M Gertrude Sweetman and A F Keogh to the parents of pupils, attributing the closure of the school to the unremitting opposition of the Bishop of Ferns, and calling on them to sign and return the attached letter of protest for despatch to the press, the Bishop of Ferns and the Abbot of Downside. Copy of a minute from the Private Secretary to the Minister for Defence stating, in regard to Sweetman's application to reopen his school, that sources revealed 'that he had not changed his coat in the interval and ... was simply "suing his book" with a view to getting fixed up—when he would go back to his old game'.

P80/453 22 April–22 May 1926

2 items

Two letters from Carlos Reuter, P W Chapman and Co, New York, to FitzGerald offering to underwrite any loan raised by the Irish Government. 'Although no steps have been taken so far towards raising a loan ... in view of the very large and influential Irish element in this country, with which we are in closest touch, it may be good policy to issue a part of the future loan on our market ...'.

Lionel Curtis, Honorary Secretary, British Institute of International Affairs, to FitzGerald, inviting him to attend a private and unofficial discussion on Dominion foreign policy between a select number of Dominion representatives and Professor Wrong of Toronto University. Copy reply from FitzGerald

P80/454 regretting his inability to attend and outlining his views on the subject. '... unity of policy or action in most big and important matters is eminently desirable, but that unity of mutualness should be based on the solid foundation of unity of interest and not on arbitrary arrangements which being in dis-accord with 'co-equal membership' may, with the passing of time, lead to irritation and friction, and therefore, to an effect contrary to the one to be desired'.

P80/507 13 April–8 July 1931

4 items

Letter from Ernest Blythe, Minister for Finance, requesting FitzGerald's opinion on W B Yeats' proposal for the establishment of an Irish Academy of Literature chartered or recognised by the Government. 'Its business would be at intervals of say three years to "crown" the best works of creative or imaginative character produced by Irishmen during the preceding triennial period'. Handwritten and typescript draft and typescript copy of FitzGerald's reply detailing the advantages and disadvantages of the proposed Academy and advising against its establishment. 'Nowadays it seems to me that there is a short cut to being recognised as a great writer by favouring communism and stressing filth ... I think if you eliminate Bolshevism and muck-raking from Liam O'Flaherty you have a very unimportant writer left ... In the case of Joyce, although he may say something more or less clearly to us, I am quite sure that he says precious little to many of his admirers abroad who praise him so whole-heartedly ... The Academy would run the risk of being derided by ... the intellectual world for neglecting these writers or would yield to a judgement that is of today perhaps, but not of eternity – and incidentally not Irish'.

4.5.2 Routine

5 LEAGUE OF NATIONS, 1923–33

5.1 Application for Admission

P80/517 20 February 1923

1p

Kevin O'Shiel, Assistant Legal Adviser, to each member of the Executive Council, drawing their attention to the rumoured appointment of Ronald MacNeill MP, 'a violent partisan of the Northern secession movement', as the British representative in the Council of the League of Nations as successor to Lord Balfour. Notes that such an appointment would be tantamount to giving the Northern Government direct representation in the League Council and sees it as yet another unanswerable reason why the Free State should make haste to join the League. Includes notation by W T Cosgrave observing that the question of entry should be definitely decided. 'Unless the state of war interfere with or prejudices our membership we ought apply in my opinion'

P80/518 14 March 1923

3pp

Secret letter from Kevin O'Shiel to each member of the Executive Council on the subject of the Free State's application for membership of the League. Emphasises the value of membership in the context of the Boundary Commission. Advocates membership of the Imperial Conference as another means of consolidating the Free State's position and as a platform for the Saorstát's case, were the findings of the Boundary Commission to prove contentious. Encloses a memorandum [missing] by B C Waller of the North Eastern Boundary Bureau concerning admission procedures to the League, with particular reference to the registration of the Treaty. Memorandum by N de Paor critical of Waller's memorandum and disputing his claims about the difficulties of preparing application documents and the according of full membership rights to applicant states with respect to matters of concern to them.

P80/519 20 April 1923

1p

Michael MacDonnchadha, Assistant Secretary to the Executive Council, to FitzGerald reminding him that President Cosgrave expected him to submit a statement at the meeting of the Executive Council on the following day concerning the Free State's application for admission to membership of the League of Nations.

5.2 Registration of the Treaty

P80/534 17,22 September 1923

2 items

Copy of a letter from Michael MacWhite, Irish representative accredited to the League, to FitzGerald, requesting that he forward a certified copy of the Anglo-Irish Treaty to the Delegation; and that he give instructions empowering them to take steps to register it and allow them discretion as to the timing of registration. Refers to a report in The Times that the Free State was definitely submitting the Boundary dispute to the League. 'This is interesting and shows a certain amount of nervousness ... It may be advisable for some member of the Government to have an interview published on the subject to the effect that it is hoped that the Boundary question would be settled amicably by the parties concerned without reference to any third party'. Copy reply from J P Walshe querying the implications attached to the date of registration and requesting the most exact and authoritative statement as to various possible lines of procedure on the part of the League authorities following an application to register.

P80/535 19 September 1923

2pp

Handwritten letter from Eoin MacNeill, Minister for Education and head of the Irish Delegation, to Cosgrave, attributing The Times 'canard' about registration to some diehards in the British delegation of the League Secretariat. Recommends that the Government adopt the Spahlinger remedy for tuberculosis.

P80/536 25 September 1923

9pp

Copy letter from Michael MacWhite to FitzGerald, enclosing a copy of a League of Nations memorandum dealing with the Registration of Treaties under Article 18 of the League's Covenant, approved by League Council in May 1920, together with a commentary on the articles of the memorandum of special relevance to the Saorstát position.

P80/537 9,30 April 1925

2 items

Copy letter from FitzGerald to Professor W Kennedy, University of Toronto, thanking him for his notes on the registration of the Treaty and informing him that the Treaty remained registered despite the British Government's insistence that Article 18 of the League's Covenant did not cover the Treaty or any similar inter se arrangement; they did not intend to pursue the matter any further. Acknowledgement from Kennedy.

5.3. Dominions Office

P80/538 6 December 1924–21 April 1926

20pp

Minister for Defence's copies of correspondence between L S Amery, Secretary of State for the Colonies, and T M Healy, Governor General, concerning British objections to the Free State's registration with the League of Nations of the Anglo-Irish Treaty and the Agreement of 3rd December 1925. Included are despatches from Healy to Amery informing him of the registration

P80/538 under the auspices of Article 18 of the league Covenant; replies contending that neither the Covenant or any Convention concluded by the League were intended to govern the relations, inter se of the various parts of the Commonwealth; and memorandum by J P Walshe describing the British refusal to recognise the registrations as 'the most barefaced explicit denial of equality of which we have an instance ... I can only suggest that we should emphatically declare that we joined the League of Nations believing the Covenant to be of universal application ... if at the mere wish of Great Britain, the League decides that the Covenant does not apply, we can give notice that we intend withdrawing'. Copies sent to the Minister for the agenda of meetings of the Executive Council or for his information.

P80/539 February–September 1926

125pp

Minister for Defence's copies of despatches from L S Amery to T M Healy, mainly concerning the future composition of the Council of the League of Nations, including Germany's application for admission to permanent membership of the Council; the claims of Poland and Spain to permanent seats on the Council; and the proceedings of the Geneva Committee on the Composition of the Council. Copies sent to the Minister for the agenda of meetings of the Executive Council or for his information.

P80/540 September 1926

12pp

Minister for Defence's copies of documents relating to the Free State's candidature for a seat on the Council of the League of Nations, circulated to each member of the Executive Council. Included are copies of letters from the Secretary of the Irish Delegation to the Secretary of each Dominion Delegation soliciting support, from FitzGerald to Sir Austin Chamberlain, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, informing him of Ireland's decision to proceed with the candidature despite opposition; Irish Delegation report on the voting and result; report of Assembly speeches by FitzGerald and Blythe; press cuttings.

P80/541 March–April 1927

9 items

Minister for Defence's copies of despatches exchanged between T M Healy and L S Amery concerning procedure in relation to

P80/541 Treaties concluded under the auspices of the League of Nations; in particular, proposals by Britain that the practice of concluding Treaties between States, first adopted at Versailles and since followed at Geneva, be abandoned and the previous practice of concluding Treaties between Heads of State be reintroduced. Copies supplied to each member of the Executive Council for their information.

P80/542 1 August 1928

2 items

Sean Ó Murchadha, Secretary, Department of External Affairs, to the Private Secretary to the Minister for Defence, enclosing a copy of the House of Lords Official Report, 11 July 1928, containing a debate on the ratification of Minority Treaties at Geneva.

P80/543 August 1928

4pp

Material relating to the return of Spain to the League of Nations, including copy of a despatch from Amery to FitzGerald enclosing a copy of a telegram sent to the Governments of other Dominion countries concerning Spain's return to the League (4 August 1928); Sean Ó Murchadha, External Affairs, to the Private Secretary to the Minister for Defence enclosing a copy of Article 4 of the temporary provisions for the election of a non-permanent member of the Council to the League (13 August 1928).

5.4 Assemblies

P80/544 4 October 1923

8pp

Copy of a report by Eoin MacNeill, Minister for Education and head of the Irish Delegation, on the proceedings of the Fourth Assembly of the League of Nations, September 1923, with particular reference to the settlement of the Italo-Greek crisis; the Canadian proposals to amend Article 10 of the Covenant; the position of Abyssinia; and the reconstruction of the state finances of Austria. Reports that the full status of Ireland was universally admitted; and that the Irish Delegation avoided making unnecessary protestations and adopted a wholly friendly attitude

P80/544 to the British who did nothing to limit Irish freedom of action. Praises the diligence and efficiency of the other Irish delegates, Kevin O'Shiel, the Marquis MacSwiney and Michael McWhite, and the invaluable assistance of Edward Phelan of the International Labour Office. Advises that Irish policy with regard to the League should be to strengthen the position of smaller nations. 'The League will not realise its aim and principles until the small nations break away from the group system and act in harmony'.

P80/545 1 May 1924

2pp

Handwritten letter from Sean McBride, 17 Rue des Domeliers, Compeigne, offering to help FitzGerald in promoting Franco-Irish relations. 'I feel strongly that, in the interest of our race and what remains of the old Celtic empire, Ireland and France should stand together whatever England or any other country does. If Mr FitzGerald wants propaganda in that direction I certainly could be useful'.

P80/546 22 October [1924]

2pp

Report by FitzGerald on his discussions in Geneva and Paris with Monsieur Massigli, French Chef du Bureau at the League of Nations, Monsieur Le Prevost, French Minister for Commerce, and various representatives of industry on the subject of Franco-Irish trade and a Franco-Irish Trade Convention.

P80/547 March 1925

5 items

Covering minute from Diarmuid Ó hEigeartaigh to FitzGerald, in Geneva, enclosing a copy of a Memorial from the Irish Franciscan Community to Benito Mussolini, appealing to him to prevent the implementation of a street-plan which would result in the demolition of the greater part of the garden or private grounds attached to the Irish Franciscan College of St Isidore in Rome. Ó hEigeartaigh recommends that the memorial, submitted by the Franciscans for signature by the Governor General, President and Vice President, should under no circumstances be signed by them; but the President is anxious to have FitzGerald's views on the matter.

P80/549 March 1926

40pp

Copy of the report of the Irish Delegation to the Extraordinary Assembly of the League of Nations, convened to deal with the application of Germany for admission to membership of the League.

P80/550 31 August 1926

1p

FitzGerald's credentials, in French, as a member of the Irish Delegation to the Seventh Assembly of the League of Nations.

P80/551 21 October 1926

3pp

Minister for Defence's copy of a memorandum by Ernest Blythe, Minister for Finance, outlining his views on Ireland's membership of the League of Nations with particular reference to the manner in which future delegations should be organised. Recommends that the Saorstát take the League more seriously, play a more prominent role, and endeavour to acquit itself more creditably in the Commissions and Assembly. 'The League generally would be strengthened by the existence of another State which took an intelligent independent line ... and the status of the Saorstát itself both in the League and in the British Commonwealth of Nations would be substantially improved'. Contends that with the exception of Desmond FitzGerald, inadequate preparation rendered the 1926 Delegation ineffective and redundant and suggests that a permanent League secretariat be established in the Department of External Affairs, that delegates be selected twelve months in advance, be comprehensively briefed and that, where possible, the same delegates should attend from year to year. Memorandum circulated to each member of the Executive Council.

P80/552 May 1928

5pp

Minister for Defence's copy of an External Affairs memorandum, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, dealing with the appointment of delegates to the Ninth Assembly of the League and the agenda for the Assembly.

Edward J Phelan, International Labour Office, Geneva, to FitzGerald mainly concerning the League Assembly and the 1926 Imperial Conference. Discusses the attempt by London to jeopardise registration of the Treaty; congratulates FitzGerald on Irish achievements at the Imperial Conference, particularly the appointment of a US Minister to Dublin; applauds the Conference Report and the acceptance of the right of the Dominion Ministers to advise the King on Dominion affairs; criticises as unintelligible the section relating to the inter se clause in League Treaties; deplores Chamberlain's statement at the Assembly that he represented the British Government and the Dominions; and encloses copies of two of his articles, 'The Sovereignty of the Irish Free State' and 'Ireland and the International Labour Organisation', which appeared in the Review of Nations and Studies respectively. Copy reply from FitzGerald in which he assures Phelan that the Government were going to raise Chamberlain's statement with London and concurs with him about the inter se clause but adds that 'It was a matter of give and take and we gave the minimum and took the most ... I think we came out fairly well on the credit side ... more so than I expected in the early part of the Conference when it looked as though the debit balance was going to be considerable'.

P80/622 27 November 1931–4 May 1941

8 items

Letters from J M N Jeffries, assistant press attaché at the British Legations, Madrid, and Irish correspondent of the Daily Mail during the War of Independence, mainly with reference to political matters. He congratulates FitzGerald on his exposure of Frank Pakenham in his reviews of Peace by Ordeal, deplores de Valera's isolationism and Irish neutrality. He reiterates his belief that if the Cosgrave administration had not fallen, the War might never have occurred, and notes changes in the tone of the coverage of Ireland by Spanish correspondents in Berlin. 'The Spanish correspondents ... are absolute carbon copies of Wilhelmstrasse feelings and ideas ... I have come to the conviction through the tenor of the Spanish comment that the preferred German plan of attack on Britain is based on an attack on Ireland first'. Includes a copy letter from FitzGerald discussing the possibility of Jeffries coming to Ireland to cover the Irish response to the war.

- P80/627 15 July 1937
5pp
Captain Thomas P Gunning, Gran Hotel, Salamanca, concerning the Spanish Civil War and bemoaning the shameful involvement of Eoin O'Duffy's Irish Brigade. 'O'Duffy and his entourage of bosthoons have given us a black eye here that will last for generations ... I was very stupid, and I did a poor day's work for both Spain and Ireland when I helped the insane, uncultured lout to put his flat and smelly feet across the frontier'. Invites FitzGerald to restore Ireland's standing by undertaking a tour of nationalist Spain at the request of Franco's propagandists. Notes the war's favourable progress despite the assistance given the 'Reds' by Russia and France.

P80/637 15 September 1940–25 March 1942

4 items

Four letters from Thomas Rudmose–Brown, Professor of Roman Languages, Trinity College Dublin, to FitzGerald. He depicts the war as a struggle between rival imperialists, precipitated by Britain, and reiterates the need for Ireland to remain neutral. 'I see no reason why Eire should commit suicide to please anybody whatever, America, Britain or Germany' (12 February 1942). He expresses surprise that FitzGerald had advocated abandoning neutrality and on correction apologises. 'I absolve you from Dillonism – we don't agree except about keeping Eire neutral' (2 February 1942). Included are condemnations of the Government's domestic policies and the denial by the Tanaiste, Sean T O'Kelly, of the existence of hunger or deprivation in Dublin. 'Nobody hungry in Dublin and bread queues everywhere! And profiteering everywhere!' (25 March 1942).

P80/668 6 October 1921–22 June 1922

36 items

Typescript copies of a series of policy documents entitled 'Views of the man in the street', circulated to Government Ministers and the Chief of Staff. Documents monitor public reaction and advise on propaganda strategies relating to the Anglo-Irish peace negotiations; the Treaty and subsequent Republican split; the North-East; Government policies and the deteriorating political situation. Included are recommendations that the Government foster suspicion abroad, particularly in America, of England's commitment to the peace negotiations, and prepare a pre-emptive propaganda blitz, absolving the Irish of responsibility were the talks to fail. Also included are suggestions that the Publicity Department become more active and that the Government produce a policy statement on unemployment, act on renaming public offices and streets in Irish, and highlight the evacuation of British troops. The writer recommends the revival of the Irish Bulletin to deal specifically with Ulster; warns of public weariness with the protracted negotiations between the Treaty factions; suggests that they be ended unless there were clear signs of progress; and advises the Government on how to respond to the provocative actions of the anti-Treatyites.

Appended are copies of a letter from George Gavan Duffy, Minister for Foreign Affairs, to de Valera inviting him to nominate four Congress delegates; congress agenda; preliminary report by Eoin MacNeill, chairman of the Government delegation; and two letters from overseas delegates to de Valera, President of the Congress Executive Committee, protesting against the appointment of

- P80/704 Robert Brennan as the Committee secretary and the failure to appoint Seamus Hughes as co-secretary, in breach of an undertaking given by de Valera and the Committee to keep their actions free from political bias.
- P80/705 1922
2pp
Typescript copy of a report from [FitzGerald] on the exploitation of the Congress by the Republican delegation and his subsequent decision to discourage press coverage of the proceedings. Reports that delegates were disgusted rather than converted by the actions of the anti-Treaty side and notes that Sean T O'Kelly, the Irish representative in Paris, acted as a party politician rather than a Government representative.
- P80/706 4,10 February 1922
6pp
Thomas H Kelly, Honorary Secretary to the Irish Race Congress, to FitzGerald, requesting the three summaries in French, given him by W B Yeats, of Yeats' lecture to the Congress on the Irish Literary Revival, for inclusion in a book on the Congress. Copy reply from FitzGerald warning that the translations were poor and suggesting that someone with a good knowledge of French check them: two summaries of the Yeats' talk, one corrected.
- P80/707 13 March 1922
3pp
Copy of a report by Maurice J O'Reilly, National Delegate for Australia, to the Congress on 'The Intrusion of domestic Irish politics at the first Irish Race Congress'.

Copy of the Tirconnail War Bulletin, vol 1, no 12, compiled by de Blacam. Copy of an article on the Civil War by de Blacam. Handwritten memo by [Cummins of the Publicity Department] on how best to exploit the letters and articles. Handwritten letter from Austin Clarke, London, protesting against de Blacam’s arrest, ‘an innocent man, purely a writer and pacifist ... what can be gained by Tzarist suppression of literature and opinion’ and copy reply from FitzGerald sharply rebutting such criticisms. ‘Mr Blackham’s association with literature is rather more remote than the association of the editor of Tit-Bits ... I do not consider it an insult to my cause for people of the Blackham type to be put in prison. I consider it an insult to my cause and to myself for any analogy to be drawn between either my cause or me and Blackham’.

P80/737 3 August 1922

1p

Copy of a message from Frank Aiken to members of the IRA serving under the Provisional Government, appealing to them not to accept the oath of allegiance or make a dishonourable peace with England. ‘War with the foreigner brings to the fore all that is best and noblest in a nation – Civil War is all that is mean and base ... The onus on stopping the fight rests with you ... It is clearly your duty if peace is not made to down tools immediately’.

P80/738 8,11 August 1922

2 items

Copies of two letters from Charles Bewley, Irish Consul to Berlin, to [Ernest Blythe], Department of Trade, advising that any anti-English propaganda in Germany be conducted with the utmost caution. He provides a translation of Irishes Bulletin, no 132, 9 August 1922, and draws attention to some inaccurate and unwise statements and comments calculated to offend Germans.

P80/758 4 May 1922

1p

Copy of a memorandum by R[obert] C B[arton] and E[rskine] C[hilders] to E de V[alera] describing the divisions within the London Plenipotentiaries during the Anglo-Irish peace negotiations and the reaction to de Valera's letter of 25 October [which ruled out any possibility of a settlement involving allegiance to the Crown]. The meeting [at which the letter was read] was a strange one for the principal reason that M[ichael] C[ollins] was in a state of violent emotion – a childish, excitable state – and was at intervals muttering that it was an attempt to stab him in the back – make him do the dirty work – and things of that sort – and insisting several times that he would go home at once. E J D[uggan] and A G[riffith] were soothing him like a child ... [A G] was insistent on your letter being an infraction of our powers ... we – that is RCB, G[avan] D[uffy] and E C – knew early in the negotiations that we were up against danger on the part of the others ... but our whole action on the negotiations must be read in the light of the fact that we never anticipated being caught in a trap and always thought we could stop a signing of allegiance by simple revolt ... The catastrophic dilemma of December 5 we never anticipated'.

2pp

Copy of a document captured at Ernie O'Malley's retreat, 36 Aylesbury Road, Dublin, consisting of a letter from Michael Comyn [Senior Counsel for the IRA] to A de S [Austin Stack] enclosing a summary of recent events, discussing resolutions before the Provisional Parliament and considering how best to deal with the Provisional Government's establishment of Military Courts. 'In my judgement we, on the legal side should face it exactly as we faced the Military Courts in Cork [established by the British in December 1920]. We should go in and defend the prisoners. Then we should apply to the Master of the Rolls for a Habeas Corpus and in case he refused, we should appeal to the Lords. Of course we could not do this officially as Republicans but when we were fighting the Military Courts in Cork, you know we were not recognised by the Republican Party. The Republican Government merely allowed the prisoners charged ... to retain Counsel for their defence'.

Minister for Defence's copy of a memorandum by Diarmuid Ó hEigearthaigh, Secretary, Executive Council, reviewing the action taken by the Council as a result of de la Paor's representations and adding that the matter would be placed on the agenda for a decision once Burke's Extinct Peerages had been consulted as to the history of the attainder.

P80/944 3 February 1925

4pp

Minute from Paul Banim, Secretary, Department of the President, to each member of the Executive Council, enclosing a copy of a letter from Stanley Baldwin, Primer Minister, to Kevin O'Higgins, Minister for Home Affairs, concerning his proposals to confer titles on Mr T J Moloney and Mr James O'Connor in the New Year Honours List. States that according to the minutes of a conversation between his predecessor Ramsay McDonald, and President Cosgrave, McDonald had agreed to postpone until the New Year the conferring of honours on Irish citizens to avoid embarrassing the Free State Government. Copy of a minute from Cosgrave denying that there had been any such undertaking between himself and McDonald as to any subsequent agreement about honours. The point I made and emphasised was that we could not agree to any honour being given to a citizen of the Irish Free State. If Mr Moloney became a citizen of another state or surrendered his citizenship of ours I did not see what affair of

- P80/944 ours it was, but while a citizen of the Irish Free State we would not consent’.

P80/972 [not dated]

10pp

Copy of a secret memorandum from J P W[alshe, Secretary, Foreign Affairs] to his Minister [Patrick McGilligan], detailing negotiations with the Dominions Office concerning the Irish demand for the creation of a separate Seal used only for confirming the King's signature on documents. Walshe endorses the compromise proposal for a Seal containing a representation of the Monarch on one side and the Irish harp on the other. 'The British have thrown up the sponge ... I think they have made up their minds not to class us any more with the other Dominions ... It would be of great advantage to be able to intimate to foreign countries that the Seals on our external documents are now purely Irish Seals ... We have broken the unity which they attached to the physical oneness of the Seal ...'.

P80/973 6 March 1931

6pp

Minister for Defence's copy of an Industry and Commerce memorandum concerning submarine cable landings on the shores of the Saorstát, in the context of Clause 2 of the Annex to the Treaty stipulating that cables could only be landed with the agreement of the British. Includes a copy of the draft Civil Service Regulation (Amendment) Bill, 1925, restricting certain examinations and appointments to Civil Service posts to specified categories, together with explanatory memoranda from Finance.

P80/1057 5 November 1925

6pp

Minister for Defence's copy for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of a Finance memorandum recommending the appointment to permanent posts of temporary civil servants who had passed the Permanent Clerical Officers Examination, and the discharge of those who had failed.

P80/1058 December 1925

13pp

Minister for Defence's copy, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of a Finance memorandum reviewing the dealing of the National Land Bank with the defunct Wolfhill Collieries Ltd. Requests Executive Council approval for the introduction of a supplementary estimate to cover the Government guaranteed loan given by the Bank to the Company. Includes copy of the receiver's report on the collieries.

P80/1059 August 1926, April 1927

3pp

Memorandum by J J McElligott, Secretary, Finance, concerning a misleading report in the Irish Independent referring to the Dáil External Loans. McElligott to [Joseph Walshe], Secretary, External Affairs, stating that it had been decided not to adhere to the date provisionally fixed for the redemption of the loans, as it had been impossible to make adequate and proper arrangements in the comparatively short time at the disposal of the Department.

P80/1060 August–November 1929

21pp

Minister for Defence's copies of notes from the Department of the President detailing individual cases of temporary civil servants with special claims to establishment on the grounds of their national service.

P80/1061 February 1931

8pp

Ernest Blythe, Minister for Finance, circulating to each member of the Executive Council a copy of a memorandum prepared 'five or six years ago', proposing a new system of electoral representation. The memo proposes single member constituencies with candidates chosen from national party lists – 'a halfway house, something not as good as the British system but better than what we have had since 1921'.

P80/1062 8 July 1931

6pp

Copy of a Finance memorandum seeking Executive Council authority for the drafting of a bill to provide a new basis for the valuation of railways for rating purposes.

P80/1063 September 1931

3 items

Minister for Defence's copies, for the agenda of meetings of the Executive Council, of three Finance memoranda concerning the national finances and the prospect of a serious budget deficit. Expresses disappointment at the unsatisfactory response to the appeal of the Minister for Finance for the cooperation of Departments in securing economies in estimated expenditure; outlines the supplementary and revised estimates for 1931–2; compares the diminishing tax revenues with the fixed or expanding expenditures; warns of a prospective deficit in 1921 of some two and a half million; stresses the need for balanced budgets and recommends tax increases, public spending cuts, and adjustments in public service pay and pensions.

9.8.8 Justice

P80/1064 December 1924–June 1925

10pp

Minister for Defence's copies, for the agenda of meetings of the Executive Council, of Justice memoranda relating to an application from the relatives of thirteen men executed by the P80/1064 British and buried in Cork Prison, for permission to have the bodies exhumed and reinterred in consecrated ground. Copy list of thirty nine persons executed by the British between 1916 and 1921 indicating whether the remains were identifiable and exhumation practicable.

P80/1065 9 January 1925

3pp

Thomas F Coyne, Secretary to the Minister for Justice, to each member of the Executive Council, enclosing a draft of a letter from Kevin O'Higgins, Vice President and Minister for Justice, to Rev M Brennan, in reply to a memorandum from Roscommon Cumann na nGaedhael. The draft letter outlines the views of the Executive Council on party unity and old age pensions; and rejects the suggestion that the Government was pursuing a business policy in disregard of Irish ideals. 'I can only state that the Government will endeavour to place the country in a sound position economically, and that it does not believe that this involves any sacrifice of National ideals'. Annotated by FitzGerald indicating approval by the Executive Council.

P80/1066 21 June 1926

1p

Letter from Einri Ó Frighil, Secretary, Justice, informing the Minister for Defence 'that the Irregulars in County Galway are collecting large sums for the purchase of 400 or 500 rifles from a party or parties at Oranmore Barracks at £1 per rifle'.

P80/1067 December 1926–March 1927

3 items

Copy of the Report of the Committee on Evil Literature appointed by the Minister for Justice on 12 February 1926 to consider and report on the need to extend censorship in the interests of public morality. Copy of a letter from Dr Daniel Cohalan, Bishop of Cork, to the Rev Dean Sexton, expressing approval of his decision to preside at a forthcoming protest meeting against the importation and circulation of unclean literature together with a copy of the resolutions passed at the meeting.

P80/1068 October 1928–July 1929

105pp

Minister for Defence's copies, for the agenda of meetings of the Executive Council, of Justice documents relating to eight individuals under sentence of death or serving life sentences for murder. Included are memoranda summarising the facts of each case, indicating whether the courts had refused leave on appeal, and in two cases of maternal infanticide recommending that the death sentence be commuted to penal servitude for life; transcripts of the trial judges' charges to the juries; and petitions for the remittal of the remainder of two commuted sentences.

P80/1069 December 1928

21 pp

9.8.9 External Affairs

P80/1070 11 June 1925

8pp

Minister for Defence's copy, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of a memorandum by S P Breathnach, Secretary, External Affairs, recommending the provision of a grant for the forthcoming Dublin Pan Celtic Congress despite the 'apparent incompetency' of the organising committee. Encloses a copy of a letter from Douglas Hyde, a member of the committee, outlining the congress provisional programme.

P80/1071 [c. 1925]

8pp

Typescript letter with handwritten annotations from George H Berkeley, submitting a short sketch of his proposed scheme of historical research on Ireland in the national archives and libraries of Europe. He bemoans the lack of awareness of Ireland abroad and suggests that trained personnel be sent to continental

P80/1071 research centres to copy for publication documents pertaining to Ireland, under the auspices of a Government-funded Commission for Historical Research. Mentions the Marquis MacSweeney of Mashonaglass as being eminently qualified to conduct the research.

P80/1072 November 1926–April 1928

17pp

Minister for Defence's copies, for the agenda of meetings of the Executive Council, of External Affairs memoranda concerning the proposed alteration in the description of holders of Saorstát passports from 'a citizen of the Irish Free State and the British Commonwealth of Nations' to 'one of his Majesty's subjects of the Irish Free State'. Includes a copy of a letter from an Irish expatriate in Chile describing the difficulties encountered by Saorstát passport holders as a result of a directive from the British Government forbidding Consuls to sign Irish passports unless they bore the words 'British subject'.

P80/1073 3 April 1928

4pp

Sean Lester, Administrative officer, External Affairs, circulating a copy of a despatch from T A Smiddy, Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington, reporting a conversation with F D Rand, a State Department official, concerning the American naval programme and her policy towards the League of Nations.

P80/1074 a copy of the Treaty present by McGilligan to both Houses of the Oireachtas.

P80/1075 21 May 1929

3pp

Copy letter from [J P Walshe], Secretary, External Affairs, to [Diarmuid Ó hEigceartaigh], Secretary, Executive Council, describing successful negotiations in Rome between Patrick McGilligan, Minister for External Affairs, and Cardinal Gasparri, Vatican Secretary of State, with a view to establishing diplomatic relations between the Saorstát and the Holy See.

P80/1076 1 October 1929

11pp

Minister for Defence's copy, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of a draft Commercial Agreement between the Free State and Portugal, circulated at the request of External Affairs, with an accompanying explanatory memorandum from Industry and Commerce.

P80/1077 10 February 1930

3pp

Minister for Defence's copy, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of an External Affairs memorandum concerning the expenditure incurred by the British Vice-Consul at Suez when arranging the embalming and return to Ireland of the body of Mary J Plunkett. Recommends that the Government reimburse the Vice-Consul out of the Contingency Fund.

P80/1078 17 February 1930

4pp

Minister for Defence's copy, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of a memorandum from J P Walshe, outlining Irish interest in the subjects to be discussed at the First Conference for the Codification of International Law, including nationality, territorial waters and the responsibility of states for damage in their territory to the persons and property of foreigners. Recommends that an active and well-informed Irish

P80/1078 delegation attend the Conference.

P80/1079 10 June 1930

7 items

Minister for Defence's copy, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of the International Convention for the Suppression of the Circulation of and Traffic in Obscene Publications, 1923, together with an explanatory memorandum from External Affairs.

9.8.10 Local Government and Public Health

P80/1080 20 November 1925–1 January 1926

6pp

Minister for Defence's copies, for the agenda of a meeting of the Executive Council, of two reports by S McGraith, a Local Government Inspector, dealing with conditions on Achill Island. McGraith concludes that Achill could support no more than half its population and recommends that the remainder be removed by operation of the Land Act, 1923. 'I consider that as much has been done to better Achill for the Islanders as can be done. The appeals of the Islanders ... have been too generously met in the past and I am keenly alive to the spirit of depravity that exists among them'.

P80/1081 12 April 1927

5pp

Minister for Defence's copies, for information, of a minute from W J Gilligan, Secretary, Local Government and Public Health, circulating to members of the Executive Council, documents relating to the death from influenza and starvation of the Sullivan family of Adrigole, County Cork. Includes a copy of a Cork Examiner report on the incident; a copy of a letter from D R Kelly, Bantry, to N P McCarron, Secretary, Local Government Board, criticising efforts to blame the Government for the tragedy; and a copy of a report by J D McCormack, Medical Inspector.

P80/1082 [c.1931]

5pp

Typescript extract from a British Treasury memorandum detailing the Irish hospitals and charities; with an appendix showing the receipts and expenditure for the Cork Street House of Industry, and the Meath and Coombe Hospitals, 1923–30.

9.8.11 Attorney General

P80/1082a 25 June 1928

8pp

Copy of counsel's opinion from A Alfred Dickie KC, FitzWilliam Square, Dublin, as to whether the land purchase annuities form part of the public debt of Great Britain.

P80/1083 [1932]

85pp, 65pp

Typescript copy and printed text of a memorandum by the Attorney General, examining the payment, and legality of the method of application when paid, of the annuities in respect of lands purchased under the pre-Treaty Land Purchase Acts. Refutes the contention that the annuities, instead of being applicable in discharge of interest and sinking fund payments on the stock by means of which the various Land Purchase Acts were financed, should be appropriated by the State as revenue. Establishes that the Free State Government had, in the collection and application of annuities, acted in strict accordance with their obligations and with the law.

P80/1084 February 1932

18pp

Minister for Defence's copies of two memoranda from the Attorney General, circulated to members of the Executive Council, containing an outline and a summary of the main points from the recent white paper on Land Purchase Annuities.

10.1 Policy

10.1.1 General

P80/1097 [1923]

2pp

Typescript draft rules of the Cumann na nGaedheal Party.

P80/1098 [1923]

4pp

'Modern Ireland. A brief sketch of recent events'. [Article for foreign publication?] tracing events leading to the War of Independence and Civil War; and highlighting the achievements of the Cumann na nGaedheal Government and the remaining tasks confronting it.

P80/1099 19 July 1923

2pp

Charles O'Sullivan, Bishop of Kerry, to Dr Brian MacMahon Coffey, President, Tralee Cumann na nGaedheal, regretfully declining an invitation to attend a public meeting addressed by President Cosgrave and expressing confidence in the Cosgrave administration.

P80/1100 June–July 1924

3pp

Copies of correspondence between Seamus O'hAodha, Secretary, Cumann na nGaedheal Coiste Gnotha [Standing Committee] and Joseph McGrath of the National Group, ex-Minister for Industry and Commerce, concerning the refusal of the National Group to discuss with the Coiste Gnotha their defection from Cumann na nGaedheal as a result of the Government's handling of Army affairs.

P80/1101 10 October 1924

4pp

Statement of views of the Coiste Gnotha concerning the contemporary political situation. Examines the reasons for apathy among Government supporters under various policy headings, including economic policy, land and appointments.

P80/1102 11 October 1924

1p

Circular letter from Seamus N O'Dolain, Cumann na nGaedheal Whip, summoning deputies to attend the second stage of the Treaty (Confirmation of Supplemental Agreement) Bill, 1924, and requesting notice of any questions for the agenda of the forthcoming party meeting concerning the programme for the next Dáil Session.

P80/1103 [1924]

5pp

Typescript copy of a Cumann na nGaedheal appeal for funds and members.

P80/1104 [1925]

2pp

Preliminary statement on policy by the Cumann na nGaedheal Committee on Policy. Emphasises the need for a clearer and more detailed statement of Government policy which would have the dual effect of preventing further secessions and of showing the country some immediate benefits from the Treaty. Suggests that Ministers consult constituency organisations prior to introducing measures; notes the widespread dissatisfaction with the current policy and organisation of the Ministry of Finance, and the general perception that it tended to perpetuate the traditions of the British Treasury rather than facilitate the development of a systematic fiscal and financial policy. Recommends that the Government consider the creation of some instrument which would allow the adoption of a liberal financial policy, would be more directly responsible to Parliament and less amenable to a foreign bureaucratic tradition.

P80/1105 18 December 1926

16pp

Letter from Liam Burke, General Secretary, Cumann na nGaedheal, to FitzGerald requesting a short New Year's message for publication in the Dublin and provincial press. Successive handwritten drafts and typescript copy of FitzGerald's statement emphasising the achievements of the previous five years with particular reference to the advances in the international position of the Saorstát.

P80/1106 25 January 1928

13pp

10pp

Typescript points for Fine Gael speakers at meetings and conventions.

10.1.2 Economic War

P80/1111 21 September 1932

3pp

W T Cosgrave to Michael Hayes expressing grave doubts about the wisdom of FitzGerald's stressing the British right to refuse lifting tariffs, pending negotiations, unless the Land Annuities were paid. 'There may be a case for the British contention. It's not for us to make it ... Why does he [de Valera] want the tariffs off. If they are hurting us, negotiate them off. Every day away from negotiations is an extra day for tariffs'.

P80/1112 1933-5

110pp

Successive typescript drafts of articles and addresses by FitzGerald criticising de Valera's handling of the land annuities and the economic war.

P80/1113 [1932]

7pp

Cumann na nGaedheal policy memorandum concerning tariffs.

P80/1114 [1933]

2pp

Copy letter [from FitzGerald to the press], taking issue with a statement by James Ryan, Minister for Agriculture, that the Fianna Fáil Government had offered to abide by arbitration on the land annuities provided the British agreed not to pack the court.

P80/1115 [1933]
2pp
Account of a speech by W T Cosgrave outlining Fine Gael policy with regard to the land Annuities.

P80/1116 June 1934
13pp

10.1.3 The Emergency

P80/1117 September 1939
4pp
Heads of policy and notes relating mainly to wartime economic policy with particular reference to the cost implications of Army mobilisation.

P80/1118 14 September 1939
4pp
Memorandum by Richard Mulcahy concerning discussions with de Valera and Sean T O'Kelly mainly relating to public expenditure on Army mobilisation in the context of national security and the risk of attack from Northern Ireland, Britain or Germany.

P80/1119 15 November 1940
5pp
Memorandum by W T Cosgrave discussing the Fine Gael strategy of accepting responsibility in the national interest for defence policies about which there had been no prior consultation or agreement, in the light of the Government's failure to provide information on their national defence plans, and a recent statement by de Valera that Irish ports were under threat of seizure by the British.

P80/1120 24 May 1941

5pp

Minute of a meeting, arranged at the Taoiseach's request, between Patrick McGilligan, Richard Mulcahy and T F O'Higgins of Fine Gael, and de Valera, Sean T O'Kelly and Gerald Boland of Fianna Fáil, to discuss an all-party response to the reported imminent imposition of conscription in Northern Ireland. Outlines responses including representations by de Valera to Churchill and the convening of a special meeting of the Dáil. Notes de Valera's analysis of conscription as a prelude to British re-absorption of Ireland and his seeming reluctance to raise the matter with Churchill. 'He said there were dangers in it. That his personal relations with Churchill were very different from those with Chamberlain ... That if he stopped conscription the Germans might think there was some secret arrangement and might attack us ...'.

10.2 General Elections

10.2.1 Policy

P80/1121 November 1932

5pp

Points from Cumann na nGaedheal speakers. Compares Fianna Fáil's election promises and performance. Deplores their mishandling of the land annuities and their precipitation of economic war. Warns that a continuation of Fianna Fáil policy would lead to communism and anarchy.

P80/1122 [1933]

4pp

List of Fine Gael polling station directors in Dublin.

P80/1123 1937

23pp

Printed notes for Fine Gael speakers at the 1937 general election.

P80/1124 March 1938

2pp

Typescript list of possible Fine Gael general election candidates.

10.2.2 Addresses

P80/1125 5 August 1923

5pp

Addresses of welcome from Castlebar Urban District Council and the people of Ballyhaunis, County Mayo, to Desmond FitzGerald, on the occasion of his visits there on August 1923, the eve of the general election.

P80/1126 [1931]

11pp

Outline of an address predicting defeat for Fianna Fáil at the next general election. Traces the achievements of successive Cumann na nGaedheal governments; berates the actions since 1922 and the recent public statements of Fianna Fáil leaders.

P80/1127 1933

3pp

Copy of a Cumann na nGaedheal general election address criticising Fianna Fáil transport policy; rejecting a claim by Sean Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, that the railway companies were not in financial difficulties; and pledging to restore lost rail traffic by ending the economic war.

P80/1128 May 1944

13pp

Handwritten and typescript drafts of general election addresses by FitzGerald at Howth, Glasthule, and Balbriggan. Deal with neutrality, the ports, and proportional representation.

10.2.3 Correspondence

P80/1129 14 June 1927

1p

John Joseph Barratt, Spanish Presbytery, George Street, Manchester Square, London, congratulating FitzGerald on his success in the recent election and expressing the hope that he would get a portfolio.

P80/1130 13 December 1932

1p

W T Cosgrave to FitzGerald, discussing how Cumann na nGaedheal should react if Frank McDermott's National Centre Party nominated candidates for the forthcoming by-election. Encloses his comments on the subject at recent meetings [missing], requests his views on the IRA and the Centre Party, and expresses his opposition to making any reference to either of the two.

P80/1131 21 June 1937

1p

James Dillon [Vice President, Fine Gael], Ballaghadereen, County Mayo, encouraging FitzGerald to write an account of events from 1916 to 1937 once the general election was over.

P80/1132 12 July 1937–21 July 1938

5 items

Five letters from W T Cosgrave, Beechpark, Templeogue, and Dáil Éireann, concerning the general election, 1937, and the Seanad election, 1938. 10.3 Biography of Arthur Griffith, 1942–44

P80/1137 26 February 1942–14 November 1944

75pp

Correspondence, mainly between FitzGerald, Senator Michael Hayes, 20 Brighton Square, Rathgar, and Sean Milroy, FitzWilliam Square, Dublin, concerning the writing by Milroy of a biography of Arthur Griffith. Includes a letter from W T Cosgrave suggesting that FitzGerald and Hayes conclude arrangements for paying Milroy and checking his work; copy of an agreement between FitzGerald, Hayes and Milroy covering the preparation, writing and publication of the book; outline structure of the projected biography; joint report by FitzGerald and Hayes on draft chapters of the book covering the period 1872–98; critical handwritten analysis by FitzGerald of part of the life; and typescript carbon copies of chapters ten, twelve, thirteen and fourteen.

10.4 Correspondence, 1929–44

10.4.1 The Star

P80/1138 11 January 1929–2 December 1931

11 items

Letters from M J Sweeney and Miss M MacNeill, successive editors of the Cumann na nGaedheal weekly review, The Star, discussing interviews with and requesting articles from FitzGerald. Included are letters from Liam Burke, General Secretary, Fine Gael, requesting a piece for the Easter Week commemoration issue, and informing FitzGerald of Sweeney's resignation and replacement by MacNeill.

10.4.2 W T Cosgrave

P80/1139 7 July 1934

1p

W T Cosgrave, Fine Gael, Merrion Square, Dublin, to FitzGerald enclosing a letter from Mrs Mannix Robertson [missing] concerning the C[riminal] L[aw] Amendment Bill.

P80/1140 29 July 1934

4pp

W T Cosgrave, Beechpark, Templeogue, to FitzGerald, enclosing a copy of a letter from Frank Pakenham, Stairways, Stone, Aylesbury, together with a proof copy [missing] of his study of the Anglo-Irish Treaty negotiations, Peace by Ordeal. Pakenham asks Cosgrave to inform him if he comes across 'anything incorrect or unfair or personally distasteful', and expresses the hope that he would not object to the inclusion in the book of hitherto unpublished confidential documents that had come into his hands from a private source. Cosgrave also encloses a copy of a letter from Sean Moynihan, Secretary, Department of the President, advising him of the Executive Council decision to raise no objection to Pakenham's use of such unpublished material and requesting his views on a proposal by President de Valera to recommend to the Executive Council official publication of documents relating to the Treaty. 'This book is a propaganda work for de V. My information is that he is now nervous of the effect of giving P[akenham] access to documents. Apparently the book has been written in collaboration with De V or Moynihan ... It is a mean trick to have selective extracts put into a book and then seek to escape by publication of the "Treaty Documents" .

P80/1141 22 October 1937

2pp

W T Cosgrave, Beechpark, Templeogue, enclosing a copy of a letter from Fr M B Gallagher, Parochial House, Kiltimagh, County Mayo, requesting information on Desmond Ryan as background for a review of The Phoenix Flame.

P80/1142 22 January 1938

2pp

W T Cosgrave, Beechpark, Templeogue, requesting FitzGerald's assistance in compiling a statement on the achievements of the 1922-32 Irish Governments. He encloses a draft list of the accomplishments and notes that 'there would be available in concise form a correct, fair but descriptive narrative of the period ... I must admit a strong prejudice against the present regime ... Reading MacEntee in the Sunday Independent, the evil thought came to my mind of Philip sober and Philip drunk - the main trouble - when was Philip sober and when was he drunk'.

W T Cosgrave, Beechpark, Templeogue, enclosing a copy of a letter from Lord Granard together with a copy of a memorandum containing extracts from a letter to Granard from Lord Southborough concerning a unanimous report of the committee of nine of the Irish Convention, 1917, which aroused the hostility of Edward Carson and Horace Plunkett, was never formally placed before the Convention, and was later destroyed by Carson. Granard confides that he could not find any record of the report in the Proceedings of the Convention and requests Cosgrave's help in securing a copy. Cosgrave notes that he had never heard of the report's existence, and asks if FitzGerald had, and remarks that 'it's just possible S[outhborough] may be interested in trying out a solution'.

W T Cosgrave, Beechpark, Templeogue, to FitzGerald on the occasion of his retirement as Fine Gael leader. Acknowledges their long and fruitful association and pays tribute to FitzGerald's courage and integrity. 'The break with public life is painful. It was my privilege and it is my consolation to have been associated with men of blameless lives, of outstanding ability and selflessness without precedent. They gave me the praise and they took the blame'.

10.4.3. Routine

P80/1148 [1935]

8pp

Incomplete handwritten letter from James Hogan [Professor of History, University College Cork], concerning Frank Pakenham's study of the Treaty and its aftermath, Peace by Ordeal. 'It struck me as a very onesided and juvenile production ... The only way to counter it is to write the true history of the period. Nothing is more extraordinary than the way in which leading Treatyites have let one vital point after another go by default out of sheer sloth ... in a little while a false legend will have been created around 1921-23 ... Would Cosgrave do nothing to put the project in motion. I have my doubts. To Mr Cosgrave's omissions, ineptitudes and utter want of vision and initiative I attribute most of Fine Gael's misfortune. He was so sure O'Duffy was a great man that he sat still and let him run amok for a whole year, while I was a crank and a lot worse because even in council I dared to oppose the mad mullah in some of his most outlandish suggestions'.

P80/1149 [1937]

11.2.1 Editors and publishers

P80/1203 March 1912–November 1934

32 items

Letters from publishers and literary journals to Mabel and Desmond FitzGerald, accepting or rejecting for publication FitzGerald's fairy tales, short stories and poetry. Included is a letter from his American literary agent informing FitzGerald that the companies approached by him had rejected his volume of fairy stories, Queens and Princesses, citing the limited market; letter from the London Film Company rejecting his original film drama, The Zeppelin Guide; and letters from Maunsel and Co, Lower Abbey Street, Dublin to Mabel FitzGerald agreeing to publish a small volume of her husband's poetry.

P80/1204 June–August 1918

5 items

Letters from the North American, Philadelphia, publishers of The Boys' and Girls' Paper, enclosing bank drafts in payment for the serialisation of 'The Prince With the Scarred Face' and copies of the published instalments. Includes a copy letter from Mabel FitzGerald acknowledging receipt of the papers, explaining that her husband was imprisoned in England but would continue to write as circumstances permitted, and requesting names of other publications to which his fairy tales might be forwarded.

P80/1205 May 1919–February 1941

14 items

Letters to FitzGerald concerning his plays, 'The Saint', 'Remembered Grace' and 'The Falling of the Blooms'. Included are letters from the Abbey Theatre enclosing a production agreement and royalties for 'The Saint'; rejection slips for the 'Man in the Boat' and 'Remembered Grace', with a reader's opinion on the latter; letters from Rev A Sheridan, St Patrick's College, requesting a copy of 'The Saint' for a school production, and from Malcolm W Davis praising the play but questioning its suitability for production in the US.

P80/1206 February–April 1941

4 items

Three letters from Eithne Lennox, Farmborough, Hants, requesting permission to produce 'The Saint', also known as 'The Wounded Heart', at a Surrey drama festival. She requests advice on dress and stage management and reports the second prize won by the play. Includes a copy of the festival programme.

11.2.2 Ezra Pound

P80/1207 April 1918–December 1928

15 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Ezra Pound, Rapallo, Italy, largely concerning literary matters and the Censorship Bill, 1928. Pound attacks the Bill as 'a worse piece of garbage than the US thing it is modelled on ... an idiotic and tyrannic measure'. FitzGerald defends the proposed legislation. 'Ireland is a Catholic country. Censorship in some form exists in every country. Here there is a proposal to put the matter in the hands of a Committee who will be enlightened and who will carry authority among the less enlightened'. Included are rejections by Pound of writings submitted by FitzGerald to him as foreign editor of the Little Review; an invitation to contribute to his proposed review [Exile]; a regretful refusal by FitzGerald, citing his heavy workload; references to Pound's musical compositions; programme for his operetta Paroles de Villon at the Salle Pleyel, Paris, 29 June 1926; and an invitation to attend a private audition of his Musique Americaine at the same venue.

11.2.3 W B and George Yeats

P80/1208 17 January 1922

1p

Typescript letter from George Yeats [wife of W B Yeats], informing FitzGerald that her husband would be unable to meet him since he had crossed to London to discuss the return of the Lane Pictures with Lord Beaverbrook, Bibbesdale and others. 'He had a letter yesterday suggesting that an agreed bill was possible and even probable and therefore thought it better to go over before the matter was brought up in the Dáil and Seanad'. Asks whether he

P80/1208 wished to await her husband's return or discuss the matter with her instead.

P80/1209 11 December 1922

1p

Typescript letter from George Yeats inviting FitzGerald to supper the following evening. 'You might send a note through to Willy tomorrow to wherever the Senate is sitting, telling him if you can, and what hour will suit you'.

P80/1210 23 January 1924

1p

Typescript letter from W B Yeats regretting that FitzGerald had been unable to get in on Monday evening. 'As practically nobody turns up on Mondays except Russell I thought myself free to abandon the evening for once'. Invites him to dinner the following Tuesday.

P80/1121 4 December 1931

2pp

Handwritten letter from Yeats at Coole Park, Gort, Galway, discussing FitzGerald's translation of a work [unidentified] by the Russian philosopher, Nikolai Berdyaev (1874–1948). 'I have read Berdyaev ... He and I have gone to the same source for our thought, whatever that source is, but I have not his impassioned faith. I accept all he says except perhaps that I think what he calls the barbarism, the mechanical unification, with its subjection of man to extreme force will last longer than he seems to think ... All he has written I have written, though not yet published. Let his thoughts be first, as mine do not have general currency. ... About six weeks ago I got Lady Gregory to ask Russell down here that we might draw out a statement under certain headings, what he called 'natural ethics'. We made no progress and parted with the idea that I should draw up something. But now I read this, Berdyaev says all that need be said'.

P80/1212 19 December 1932

2pp

Typescript letter from Yeats at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, written while completing an American lecture tour, asking FitzGerald if he had taken any steps as previously discussed 'to get together a few persons who would join us in considering the Marxian revolutionary theory in relation to St Thomas and modern philosophy ... to think out something among us which would give a foundation for advanced thought in Ireland'. Admits to feeling homesick and adds 'I hear upon all hands that the old Irish-American political organisations are evaporating but that the interest in our history and in our books and plays is everywhere on the increase'.

P80/1213 30 March 1933

3pp

Typescript letter from Yeats, Rathfarnham, to FitzGerald enclosing a typewritten copy of his suggestions for a discussion on communist and fascist philosophies. 'What I think most important is to preserve the dynamic element of Fascism, the clear picture of something to be worked for. We have to take everything we legitimately can from our opponents'.

P80/1214 10 April 1939

2pp

George Yeats, Rathfarnham, thanking FitzGerald for his letter of condolence on the death of her husband. 'When he returns to Sligo I hope you may find it possible to be among the people (not 'representing the Seanad') who will come to his 'planting' in Drumcliffe. He will come by boat to Sligo ... I do not care whether Dublin, as I am continually told, regrets that he is not to be buried at St Patrick's. I am convinced that his wishes were conveyed in that poem 'under Ben Bulben' which I sent to the newspapers on February 3rd. You may not agree but I rather wish you would'.

P80/1215 26 June 1939

1p

Typescript letter from George Yeats, asking FitzGerald if a collection of typescripts uncovered when sorting papers prior to

P80/1215 moving house were summaries of writings by Berdyaev, annotated by FitzGerald.

P80/1216 16 February 1944

1p

George Yeats, 46 Palmerstown Road, Dublin, concerning difficulties in the settlement of her late mother's estate. She requests FitzGerald's assistance in obtaining a travel permit to go to England to try to expedite matters.

11.2.4 Paul Henry

P80/1217 February 1922–August 1925

5 items

Four photocopied and one handwritten letter from Paul Henry and his wife Grace, requesting tickets for the Dáil, inviting him to chair a lecture to be given by James Stephens, and enquiring as to whether a Mrs Brophy would be interested in his paintings.

11.2.5 Lennox Robinson

P80/1218 July 1922–[c. 1940]

8 items

Handwritten and typescript letters from Lennox Robinson, mainly inviting FitzGerald to afternoon tea and dinner. Includes a copy letter from FitzGerald congratulating him on his splendid Henry IV at the Abbey and letter from Robinson agreeing that the 'little dining club' should be revived. Suggests P S O'Hegarty, James Dillon and Myles na gCopaleen as possible members.

11.2.6 Francis Hackett

P80/1219 October 1922–July 1929

37 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Francis Hackett, writer and critic, and his wife, Signe Toksvig, the Danish playwright, mainly with reference to personal, literary, and political matters. Included are requests for assistance in securing and renewing their Irish passports; exchanges concerning Hackett's eventually successful plans to settle in Ireland; his abortive attempt to interview President Cosgrave for an American press syndicate; the civil war; the Army mutiny; the divorce debate; the absence of liberal humanism in Irish life; the danger posed by de Valera; and the inability of the Irish to face the reality of self-government. Also includes correspondence concerning their writings; Hackett's biography of Henry VIII; his lecture tours of America; positive critique of FitzGerald's novel Chinadek; discussions on Yeats, Ireland's peasant ideology, and provincialism; and three letters from Signe Toksvig concerning the possible publication of FitzGerald's fairy tales.

11.2.7 Oliver St John Gogarty

P80/1220 December 1922–November 1926

3 items

Three handwritten letters from Oliver St John Gogarty inviting FitzGerald to Monasterevin for Christmas; discussing a proposed visit to Lady Talbot de Malahide; and acknowledging receipt of and congratulating FitzGerald on his recently published volume of poetry.

11.2.8. Edward Storer

P80/1221 14 December 1923–18 January 1924

5 items

One handwritten and two typescript letters from Edward Storer [Imagist poet], Rome, describing his life in Italy, his experiences as an Italian conscript, and his work as a press correspondent; he asks FitzGerald to secure him a position as Italian correspondent

P80/1211 on any Dublin paper; encloses a copy [missing] of his volume of poetry, Terra Italica; and regrets that he hadn't written seriously for years. He offers to publish FitzGerald in his literary review Atys; invites him to become its Dublin correspondent; and passes on news of fellow Imagists, F S Flint and Richard Aldington. Copy replies from FitzGerald promising to contact the Dublin papers and admitting that he had written nothing since entering Government in 1919. 'My brain sometimes moves, so that I am still hoping that as soon as this life permits of a certain amount of leisure I shall revert to normal. I envy you in Rome'.

11.2.9 T S Eliot

P80/1222 6 March 1931–26 February 1945

12 items

Typescript letters from T S Eliot in his capacity as editor with Faber and Faber, and of the quarterly review, The Criterion, concerning matters of a personal and literary nature. He requests FitzGerald's advice on the structure of a projected book on Ireland; rejects his proposed volume on the mutiny on the Bounty; introduces him to visiting Americans; discusses the plight of mutual French friends stranded in occupied Paris; confesses that he hadn't yet read FitzGerald's three plays; consults him about the disposition of some valuable Joyce manuscripts held by an unnamed friend; wonders if official Dublin was ready to accept them; and discusses Joyce's family. Included are two Christmas cards and a copy of his poem East Coker, reprinted from the New English Weekly.

11.2.10 Stella Miles Franklin

P80/1223 February 1940–June 1948

4 items

Typescript letters from the Australian writer, Stella Miles Franklin, Carlton, New South Wales, reminiscing about her visits to Dublin in 1919 and 1926, and her meetings with Irish literary and political figures; discussing the Yeats' autobiography Dramatis Personae (1936); enquiring if a literary society in Dublin was still awarding prizes for works of fiction by people of Irish extraction; and enclosing press cuttings and one of her books [both missing]. Includes a letter from one of her friends, Frank Clune, discussing his uncle, the late Archbishop of Perth, who P80/1223 FitzGerald had mentioned in one of his letters.

11.2.11 General literary correspondence

P80/1224 27 February 1914

4pp

Typescript copy letter from FitzGerald, Ventry, Kerry to F S Flint, a founder of the Imagist movement, concerning literary matters. He thanks Flint for a copy of [Ezra Pound's] review The Egoist, compliments him on his poems in the review; dismisses T E Hulme as a 'charlatan'; asks Flint's opinion on his own short stories. 'I always desire to write happy romantic things but there is some jaundiced element hidden in me and the moment I begin to write it manifests itself and makes my work appear cynical and I do not admire cynicism'. Confides his desire to achieve success as a dramatist.

P80/1225 February 1924–July 1931

72 items

Correspondence with Parisian booksellers, mainly La Maison des Amis des Livres, Rue de l'Odeon, ordering and paying for French literary and philosophical texts. 4pp

Copy letter from FitzGerald to Bernard and Barbara Wall, Paris, mainly containing news of his colleagues at Notre Dame University, Indiana; his meetings there and in New York with Jacques Maritain; and the delayed publication of Preface to Statecraft. 'The death of Yeats came as quite a blow to me. I had noted with grief for some years past that each time I saw him there was a deterioration of health. But when I came back from America and found that he was in the South of France I just took it for granted that I should see him on his return. I had a number of points that I wanted to talk to him about. You know I discovered his work when I was about fourteen, and I don't suppose it would be possible to have anything like that experience twice in a life-time'.

P80/1290 [1940]

3 items

Handwritten circular in French [from Jacques Maritain?] appealing for signatures to an enclosed manifesto protesting against the Italian invasion of Egypt.

2pp

Draft letter from FitzGerald to [Arnold] Lunn [a fellow visiting lecturer at Notre Dame] referring to disagreements between them with particular regard to Chamberlain's policy and refusing to engage in any further correspondence. He accuses Lunn of listening to college gossip. 'If I gave the impression of attacking the personal honour of Mr Chamberlain I am very sorry. But I think that by a firm stand during the last crisis Chamberlain would not only have avoided war but would also have created a foundation for a juster and more stable peace'.

P80/1304 8 February 1939

2pp

Shane [Leslie, a former lecturer in Notre Dame], Grove End Road, London, thanking FitzGerald 'for your charming letter which

P80/1304 brings back all of the Notre Dame Campus to me ... Yeats' death rang a knell and a chapter of life and history seemed at a close ... Poor Yeats how he felt and hated the slow decay of the body and longed no doubt to slough it away in some astral fire. He remained young by his symbolism which had made of the old Hag of Beare a young and glittering Queen -'.

- P80/1333 [not dated]
18pp
Typescript polemic on the prejudices and limitations of literary criticism vis-à-vis Catholic writers. FitzGerald argues that Catholic writers had been unfairly dismissed as a result of the pervasive belief that their work was vitiated by its Catholicism. 'As lovers of what is beautiful in literature we should endeavour to obtain a just appraisal of the work of men who have not been justly valued. We do not say he is great because he is a Catholic but we do say that if he is great that fact should not be denied because he participated in our faith'.
- P80/1334 [not dated]

P80/1369 [1938]

3pp

Incomplete draft review of Sean O'Faolain's biography of Daniel O'Connell [King of the Beggars]. FitzGerald commends O'Faolain's insight but criticises as misleading his depiction of O'Connell as a peasant and his 'singular lack of understanding of the whole religious side of his subject'.

P80/1370 [1939]

4pp

Review of Desmond Ryan [The Sword of Light – the Irish language movement (1939)].

P80/1371 [1940]

11pp

Two typescript drafts of a review of Donal O'Sullivan, The Irish Free State and its Senate (1940). FitzGerald commends it as 'a standard work necessary to anyone who wishes to understand the developments in Ireland during the last eighteen years ... The one thing we have learned from the various experiments is that, of all systems of forming a Senate, the one at present in force is the worst'.

P80/1372 [1940]

11pp

Draft typescript response to an unidentified auditor's paper on Irish nationalism.

P80/1373 [1940]

6pp

Annotated typescript draft of a vote of thanks to the auditor of an unidentified society, speaking on the crisis in Europe. 'But tonight we meet almost within hearing distance of war that may bring ruin to that order and culture and it may be that more than ever we are poignantly conscious that we are of Europe, that her heritage is ours also, and that its ruin would mean the loss of those things that are most dearly cherished by us'.

P80/1374 [1941]

3pp

Incomplete typescript draft proposing a vote of thanks in response to an unidentified auditor's paper on censorship in Ireland.

P80/1375 1943

4pp

Draft appreciation of Sarah Purser (1849–1943), stained glass artist and portrait painter.

P80/1376 1943

2 items

Two drafts of articles on Michael Collins, one published in the Sunday Independent, August 1943.

P80/1377 [not dated]

2pp

Incomplete typescript tribute to the founders of the Irish state. 'They found their country a lifeless corpse. They poured their lives even to the last drop of their blood into her that she might live. And before their eyes closed in death they saw a stirring in her limbs ... They wanted no honour but the honour of serving the people to whom they had given their love'.

P80/1378 [not dated]

7pp

Typescript copy article dealing with the events which led to the Civil War.

P80/1379 [not dated]

6pp

Incomplete typescript anecdotal account of the rise of the Irish Volunteers and the realisation by FitzGerald and his fellow Volunteers, Ernest Blythe and the O'Rahilly, of the inevitability of armed insurrection.

P80/1380 [not dated]

43pp

Typescript drafts of a personal account and analysis by FitzGerald of the period leading up to and surrounding the Treaty, underlining and attempting to counteract the variations on historical fact in the available accounts of the period [written in response to Peace by Ordeal?]

- P80/1381 [not dated]
15pp
Successive typescript drafts of an article or address on the politics of the next Irish generation.
- P80/1382 [not dated]
5pp
Introductory section of an account by FitzGerald of his youthful interest in philosophy and poetry and his political awakening.
- P80/1383 [not dated]
1p
Galley proofs of an article on Dublin for The Holiday Book.

11.5.4 Correspondence

- P80/1384 October–November 1932
4 items
Terence de Vere White, Trinity College Historical Society, thanking FitzGerald for agreeing to participate in a debate on ‘Leninism and laissez-faire’ and enclosing a copy of one of the papers; draft and copy final text of FitzGerald’s paper.
- P80/1385 August 1933–July 1946
19 items
Letters from newspapers, publishers and journals mainly seeking articles and reviews. Included are requests from The Spectator and Current History Review for pieces on the Irish political situation; from the Observer, New Catholic Herald and London Mercury for reviews of Frank Pakenham Peace by Ordeal, Frank O’Connor The Big Fellow and Sean O’Faolain King of the Beggars respectively; a copy of FitzGerald’s review of Rosamund Jacobs The Rise of the United Irishmen for Arena; and repeated offers from William Heinemann and Methuen to publish his memoirs.

P80/1386 29 August 1935

2pp

Copy letter from FitzGerald to Rev Connolly SJ, 30 Lower Leeson St, Dublin, enclosing proofs of an article [missing] on the Anglo-Irish Treaty negotiations and aftermath as a riposte to Pakenham's Peace by Ordeal.

P80/1387 April 1936–November 1937

10 items

Letters from Thomas Burns, a director of The Tablet, requesting a series of 'Dublin Letters' from FitzGerald; calling on him to respond to a leader in the Irish Press; and corresponding with him concerning the nature of occasional contributions to the journal. Included are congratulatory letters from Tablet readers and a note from a Fianna Fáil supporter condemning as narrow and malicious the response of the Irish Press to FitzGerald's article on the need for a Catholic intelligentsia.

P80/1388 25 October 1939

1p

J D Hughes, editor, Trinity College Historical Society, enclosing a copy of his address, 'History and the war', offering to delete anything objectionable and inviting FitzGerald to propose a motion of support for the Society after the address.

P80/1389 15 October 1940

1p

Incomplete typescript copy letter from FitzGerald to Count Michael de La Bedoyere, editor of the Catholic Herald, enclosing his review of Donal O'Sullivan The Irish Free State and its Senate, and congratulating him on his continual wartime production of the Herald. Criticises the paper's Irish coverage but compliments Bedoyere on his article on Chamberlain. 'I think he has been treated with gross injustice ... About the time of Munich, I was in America ... I came back to Europe and found all the left wingites denouncing Chamberlain for not having given Hitler a punch in the jaw. When he tried to prepare for war they objected to conscription. When war came they would not share in Government ... They used the peril of their country as a means of jettisoning him'.

11.5.5 Printed matter

P80/1390 February–March 1944

2 items

Two copies of Everybody's Weekly containing articles by Beverly Baxter MP on Ireland during the war.

P80/1391 22 November 1946

12 GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE, 1922–47

P80/1393 December 1922–February 1947

73 items

File of letters of a routine and personal nature received by FitzGerald. Included are letters of thanks for his kindness and hospitality during visits to Ireland; invitations to social and cultural functions; and representations concerning employments, pensions and wartime travel permits. Includes Peter C Larkin, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, Victoria Street, London, praising in the highest terms an after dinner speech by [Eoin?] MacNeill at the Canada Club on the previous evening. 'I might add that during my conversation with [Sir Philip Lloyd-Graeme] the President of the Board of Trade he expressed the greatest admiration for the capacity and resource shown by Mr Cosgrave and in this he was only re-echoing what we hear on all

P80/1393 sides' (25 April 1923). Also includes J Kiernan, Rome, informing FitzGerald of Jacques Maritain's arrival in the city, the presentation of his credentials to the Pope, and the way in which he might be contacted. 'I said that in Ireland his works had been made know especially by you. He lit up and asked me was I a friend of your and said that he knew no foreigner who has a wider knowledge of French literature than you' (26 May 1945). Also includes Maire Comerford, St Nessan, Sandyford, County Dublin, requesting assistance in collecting evidence to support her application for a military service pension. Recalls her activities gathering statements of Black and Tan outrages for the Irish Bulletin. 'If you remember that you sometimes emptied your pockets of sedition and gave the precious material to me to keep in my dump overnight, off and on' (15 July 1945).

P80/1394 February 1923–October 1946

23 items

Letters of introduction to FitzGerald. Included are introductions to casual visitors, journalists and broadcasters, academics, businessmen, diplomats and politicians, from John Betjeman, Padraic Colum, Philip Graves and William MacKenzie King, Canadian Prime Minister, among others.

P80/1395 1923–36

P80/1396 June 1923–January 1927

6 items

Correspondence between FitzGerald and Hans Christian Deichmann, Hovgaard, Hobro, Denmark, a former German prisoner-of-war who had served six months with FitzGerald in Mountjoy Gaol in 1915 for attempting to escape from Oldcastle Internment Camp. Letters mainly contain details of their subsequent careers and requests from Deichmann for assistance in obtaining work.

13 FAMILY AND PERSONAL

13.1 Letters to his Wife

13.1.1 Internal exile, imprisonment, and the London peace conference, 1915-21

P80/1397 [July 1915]

4pp

Desmond FitzGerald, Kilmolin House, County Wicklow, confined to Wicklow after his expulsion from Kerry under the Defence of the Realm Act, to his wife Mabel, attending the Gaelic League Ard Fheis in Dundalk, mainly containing family news and details of his brother Francis' visit to Kilmolin. Included are references to Laurence Ginnell's parliamentary agitation against the use of expulsion orders, and the recently launched paper New Ireland.

P80/1398 February-March 1916

21pp, 22pp

Two typescript letters from Mabel FitzGerald, 3 Loreto Villas, Bray, to Desmond serving a six month sentence in Mountjoy Gaol for contravening the Defence of the Realm Act. Letters contain details of her daily activities; anecdotes about their sons; family news; descriptions of lunches with The O'Rahilly; visits from Bulmer Hobson, Sean McDermott and the poet Edward Storer; news of Ernest Blythe's activities; the fine imposed on Terence MacSwiney; the arrests of Claud Chevasse in Macroom and Volunteer activists in Glasgow; the engagement of Joseph Mary Plunkett and Grace Gifford; and the imposition of censorship in Cork and Kerry. She reports the launching and renewal of nationalist journals; outlines her activities at Volunteer Headquarters; and describes numerous political meetings, and propaganda and fund-raising events, with particular reference to an inaugural Cumann na mBan meeting and an anti-tax gathering in Bray. 'As a matter of fact his year will see a rather riotous Lent in Dublin. Concerts, Card Drives and Ceilidhs galore, two a night often. Money must be raised and people think our causes justify raising it at Lent'.

P80/1399 14 March 1917

4pp

Mabel FitzGerald, 27 Effra Road, Rathgar, to her husband in Lewes Prison, wishing him a happy St Patrick's Day, informing him that she and their son Pierce would visit him on the 24 March and looking forward to seeing him again.

P80/1400 [c.1918]

2pp

Pencil letter from FitzGerald in London to Mabel, reporting on his successful search for a Mrs Hopkins, and his other personal and official contacts and activities.

P80/1401 [c. 1921]

2pp

Pencil letter from FitzGerald, visiting the Publicity Department London Office, to Mabel concerning their son Fergus' illness, his worries about his personal health, and his anxieties about work. 'I am haunted by worries and shall be glad to get back to face the trouble instead of having it hang over me ... Also have been let in for another job by A[rt] O'B[rien] – nothing to do with me, and am up to my eyes ... I do feel that I wish we could retire somewhere into the desert'.

P80/1402 19 July 1921

2pp

Letter from FitzGerald on release from the Curragh Internment Camp to attend the peace negotiations in London, to Mabel, mainly concerning the progress of the talks. 'I have been trying to pick up the threads. Poor Erskine [Childers] does seem very worn out, A[rthur] G[riffith] quite gay, the President charming as usual. Our official statement is that we are 'not unhopeful' which is an exact description'.

P80/1403 [c. 1921]

2pp

Note from FitzGerald to Mabel informing her that he would be unlikely to get out for the weekend, wouldn't return until the following week, and that his brother Francis' courtcase had been adjourned.

13.1.2 League of Nations, 1924–8

P80/1404 September 1923

3 items

Two letters from FitzGerald, in Geneva to attend the Fourth Assembly of the League of Nations on the occasion of Ireland's accession, to Mabel describing the journey to Geneva, stopovers in Paris and Genoa, and the exhausting social round of dinners and receptions. 'Dinner last night with Finns. Afternoon to see President of League [Cuban]. Morning at Commission where I made speech of two sentences' (P80/1404 (2)). 'We have a continual series of meals – meals that last anything from two to four hours. You can imagine how I enjoy it, everyone is very charming. But the strain of politeness, good behaviour and over-eating tell on one' (P80/1404 (3)).

P80/1405 August–September 1924

6 items

Handwritten letters from FitzGerald in Geneva attending the Fifth Assembly of the League of Nations, to Mabel mainly concerning his efforts to find a suitable school in Switzerland or France for their eldest son Desmond; describing various dinners and receptions; commenting on the progress of the Assembly; and bemoaning a painful neck ailment which curtailed his activities.

P80/1406 September 1925

9 items

Nine handwritten letters from FitzGerald, in Geneva to attend the Sixth Assembly of the League of Nations, to Mabel, mainly concerning his stay with his family in England prior to his departure for Geneva; his short stopover in Paris en route; his

P80/1406 daily attendance at the Assembly and the Commission; and the bustling social scene.

P80/1407 September 1926

6 items

Six letters from FitzGerald in Geneva for the Seventh Assembly of the League of Nations, mainly concerning his election and functions as Chairman of the Second Commission; the Free State's hastily prepared and unsuccessful attempt to win a non-permanent seat on the League Council; his satisfaction with the strategies and achievements of the Irish delegation; the unsatisfactory nature of Irish press coverage of the Assembly; the probable admission of Germany to the League; and the incessant round of diplomatic and social engagements. 'I am to be, I am told, the Chairman of 2nd Comm[issio]n. I don't know anything about it except that it deals with everything that I am least interested in' (P80/1407 (1)). 'One unceasing rush for me ... My worst day was Wed[nesday] ... Confab with others before Assembly - due there 10 o'clock. Wrote speech there. Made speech. Off to lunch ... everyone coming up to me - we were the big event. After assembly 3 hours with Chamberlain and Dominions. MacNeill went with me - spoke highly of the way I conducted the diplomatic business' (P80/1407 (3)). 'The Irish newspapers that I have seen have been worthy of themselves - they seem to get the wrong end of everything with perfect genius. If we had a proper press we should have had good publicity - but though the Irish Times quotes their 'own correspondent' no such person exists ... We have been one of the most prominent countries here and those damn fools haven't sense enough to make anything out of it' (P80/1407 (4)).

P80/1408 22 September 1928

9 items

Nine handwritten letters from FitzGerald, in Geneva for the Ninth Assembly of the League, to Mabel, mainly concerning his diplomatic and social engagements; his discussions with M B Massigli of the French League of Nations Secretariat concerning a Franco-Irish trade treaty; his proposed visit to the French Foreign Minister in Paris; with references to Assembly proceedings, the presence of G B Shaw, and family matters.

13.1.3 Imperial Conferences, 1923–30

P80/1409 October–November 1923

4 items

Four letters from FitzGerald attending the Imperial Conference 1923 in London, to Mabel, mainly concerning the uncertainty surrounding the length of his stay.

P80/1410 November 1926

3 items

Three letters from FitzGerald attending the Imperial Conference 1926 in London, to Mabel mainly concerning family affairs, the progress of the Conference, and related social occasions. Refers to the completion of the Inter-se Relations report. 'We of course were the people who did the fighting in it. K[evin] O'H[iggins] was at dinner with the Simons last night and he is quite indignant about MacK[enzie] K[ing, Canadian Prime Minister] who spoke of the way he and we worked together when as a matter of fact we did the fighting and got damned little support' (P80/1410 (2)).

P80/1411 September–November 1930

30 items

Twenty nine letters from FitzGerald attending the Imperial Conference 1930, to Mabel. Letters dwell at length on the proceedings of the General Economic Committee and the Sankey Committee on Inter-Imperial Relations and describe the conflict between R B Bennett, Canadian Prime Minister, and Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, arising from the Labour Government's declared policy of doctrinaire free trade. FitzGerald sympathises with the inexperienced British ministers but deplores with increasing exasperation their lack of preparation and their procrastination. He records an atmosphere of increasing acrimony and details the support offered by the other delegations to the Irish in their struggle for complete constitutional autonomy. Included are references to the punishing workload; innumerable social commitments; interviews; dinners and official functions; and meetings with literary figures including G B Shaw, T S Eliot, Philip Graves and F S Flint. The letters have been dated by Mabel FitzGerald on their receipt and this date is given in the descriptions. Includes a list of dates [on which the letters were sent?]. 'This morning Conference. It is irritating to be dealing with men who are badly briefed. They were discussing matters and had

P80/1411

[or pretended to have] the wrong end of the stick. I told them that I had dealt with the matter in '26 and what the circumstances were. [Ramsay MacD[onald]] said I was wrong and proceeded to prove it by reading from the Report and landed on a sentence that just proved what I said. That sort of thing happened constantly and makes them irritable' (4 October 1930, P80/1411 (4)).

Describes a formal dinner at Buckingham Palace. 'Had a couple of words with King afterwards, dodged Queen but Duke of Connaught asked for me – his dearest friend is Lady Leslie and he knew about me from her. Had long talk with Lord Shaftsbury ... All went off well. [J H] Thomas [Secretary of State for the Dominions] talked a lot to us. Consequently I heard more blasphemy and general bad language than for a long time' (6 October 1930, P80/1411 (5)).

'I suppose I told you yesterday that I am invited by the Webbs for the weekend after next. If they had given me shorter notice it would have been easier to refuse. You can imagine my enthusiasm for a weekend of Poor Law reform! The air disaster is a pretty big blow [The R101 crash in France, 5 October 1930, with the loss of forty eight lives]. It does seem that the ship was definitely faulty. And that making airships is a purely German art. I suppose that there will be a State funeral here' (8 October 1930, P80/1411 (7)).

'I don't think Bennett will last long in Canada. He has a bombastic way with him – the sort of man who probably did a lot of talk in opposition and will fail hopelessly to deliver the goods. Hertzog [Prime Minister of South Africa] is a dear even though he sometimes goes completely wrong through not understanding things. His staff want us to get after him more to keep him right' (10 October 1930, P80/1411 (8)).

Refers to a meeting of the Sankey Committee. 'It was amusing that we had to explain to Lord Chancellor and Att[orney] Gen[eral] of England all about seals. They had an expert there (Lord Shuster) but he was asleep when called on and couldn't grasp what was being discussed so he came round to us. [Sir William] Jowitt [Attorney General] asked about the privy seal but we told him it was abolished in 1851' (11 October 1930, P80/1411 (10)).

'T S's [Eliot] wife is severe and only allows him out on the understanding that he gets back early. I had letter from him yesterday morning saying hoped if I were unable to go last night we could arrange a lunch or dinner together' (21 October 1930, P80/1411 (14)).

'[Jacob] Epstein had just lost a law case with all the rights on his side. Very affable – even said he must do a bust of me as I was a famous man. Am to go round and see his work some afternoon this week. He and Mrs were in America when Pres[ident Cosgrave] and I went' (21 October 1930, P80/1411 (16)).

'The other night P[rince] of W[ales] commented to Tody [Patrick McGilligan] on youthful appearance of Hogan and me – Tody said that in spite of that we were His Majesty's oldest ministers – P said glad to hear him say that. I said – that we are oldest Gov[ernment]t? No said P but to hear your refer to my father. I thought you or at least your people wanted to cut him out' (22 October 1930, P80/1411 (17)).

P80/1411 cont 'Yesterday was appalling. Massed British guns directed on us. I never had such a day. And poor Tody who has the heaviest burden will be a wreck, I should think. Faced with dishonesty, treachery and cowardice. Only satisfaction is that no one could have any doubt as to who won the argument or who had right on their side. Scullin and Hertzog splendid. (I am referring to Privy Council matter). Brit[ish] have consulted Tories and are told they will be opposed if they meet us on that point ... [J H] Thomas completely dishonest and treacherous. Ramsay [MacDonald] contemptible. Plainer speaking than ever yesterday. Tody told off old Sankey [Lord Chancellor] so much in the morning that he did not appear in the afternoon' (6 November 1930, P80/1411 (26)).
'Yesterday afternoon was economic affairs. Amusingly plain spoken. The British were told that they had been fooling the Dominions. Having told them to go off and examine various alternatives to tariffs they are told that the British will not legislate for any of them. Also having told the Dominions they will not put tariffs on food (the only thing of interest to Dominions) they turn round at the end and propose that all agree not to increase tariffs against England until three years hence – or after Ottawa Conference whichever is soonest. It is really all farcical – an awful display of ineptitude. Trying to be clever they have only made things worse for themselves' (12 November 1930, P80/1411 (29)).

13.1.4 American tours 1928–9

P80/1412 1928

3 items

Three letters from FitzGerald to Mabel, written while accompanying President Cosgrave, Joseph P Walshe, Secretary, Department of External Affairs, and Diarmuid O'Hegarty, Secretary to the Executive Council, on a state visit to America. He describes their hospitable reception in New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago and Washington; their punishing itinerary; the positive response to their speeches; meetings with US politicians, Dominion diplomats and the press; their social and public commitments; and the reaction of republican activists to their visit.

P80/1413 September–November 1929

16 items

Sixteen letters from FitzGerald in the US to Mabel in London, written from New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Washington during a publicity and fund-raising tour with Tom O'Higgins,

P80/1413

[James?] Burke [Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Finance], and Sean MacKeown. Include details of his itinerary; daily visits to the homes of prominent Irish-American personalities; courtesy calls on political and religious leaders; numerous speeches at lunches and dinners; his impressions of the US; and anxiety concerning the fund-raising aspect of the tour. Family matters are also included.

'The speeches have been successful so far - in as much as the people seem please by them. I am not struck by them (my speeches) myself but that doesn't matter. The other side of our mission has produced nothing tangible so far' (9 October 1929, P80/1413 (4)).

'It is strange how right my first impressions were. I didn't like this town [Philadelphia] when I saw it first and don't now. I still think Chicago the most beautiful city and the people the nicest. Strangely enough it seems to me that it is the one place that has what might be called a brilliant society life. And of course it is the last place you would expect to find it' (27 October 1929, P80/1413 (12)).

'You can imagine that the collapse of [the] market isn't helpful to us - for although I believe some of our friends may have assisted it - and I don't think that many that we are interested in will lose by it - still it makes for a general depression and nervousness. We are not a very cheerful party' (29 October 1929, P80/1413 (13)).

'... a car at 35 miles an hour caught MacK[eown] and sent him 20 feet. I rushed to him thinking he was dead - he was crumpled up with head on ground - when I turned him over blood went all over my shirt. Got him to hospital, spent night between hospital and police ... And next morning called on [President] Hoover, Sec[retary] for State, and War Minister etc ... News was not good - five ribs broken - head had been stitched previous night - bruised and shaken ... I see in paper that Ernest [Blythe] has become a Catholic. I wonder is it true - I am inclined to believe it' (5 November 1929, P80/1413 (16)).

13.1.5 University of Notre Dame

P80/1414 September 1935-June 1939

96 items

Letters and telegrams from FitzGerald to Mabel, written during his various visits to the US as a guest lecturer at the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, describing his journeys to America; the progress of his courses; social and college events; extra-mural speaking engagements; his hospitalisation in 1935 with an ear infection; and the heatwave of 1936. He comments favourably on the energy and enthusiasm of his students and fellow lecturers; describes visits to relations in New York and Chicago; discusses family and personal matters; refers to political events in Ireland

P80/1414 with particular reference to de Valera's attitude to and action against the IRA violence; and welcomes the letters, books and press cuttings sent by Mabel. Included are copies of telegrams from Mabel concerning his illness and hospitalisation.

P80/1415 September–November 1935

6 items

Material relating to FitzGerald's illness and hospitalisation. Copy letter from Mabel to Dr Barnville, Desmond's physician, informing him of the illness and requesting information from FitzGerald's medical history that might throw light on the condition. Two letters from Maurice Moriarty, attorney, Chicago, and letter from Teresa Stack, New York, both relations of FitzGerald, keeping Mabel informed of Desmond's illness, advising her against travelling to Indiana, and reassuring her about his return to health. Typescript notes concerning the nature, diagnosis and treatment of the infection, extracted from FitzGerald's and his doctor's letters; and list of relevant correspondence.

P80/1416 September–December 1938

38 items

Letters from Mabel FitzGerald to her husband lecturing at Notre Dame University, Indiana. She concentrates largely on family matters; details their sons' activities; agonises over the question of moving house; discusses the Czechoslovak crisis; initially welcomes and later expresses doubts about the Munich accord; dreads the prospect of war; keeps him abreast of domestic politics; and forwards his mail, photographs, newspapers and books. Included are three letters from her husband welcoming and discussing news from home and commenting on the success of his classes and public lectures.

'I am terribly worried about the very great likelihood of war. It is a horror to me. I suppose to everyone, though the young people, though far more sober about it than their kind before the Great War, hardly realise all that it will mean. Still, I think they are remarkably sensible. Ours are anyway ... The papers today say that the despondency in London lifted a little last night, and that Berlin is optimistic, but there is nothing in the news to account for that; there may be things on foot not in the press, it just might be that Hitler was conscious of all he was undertaking. Or less conceivably, that Chamberlain's and the French plan for the peace of Europe was under consideration after all. Only after the Czechs had been sacrificed of course, and Bohemia left with an open frontier ready for Hitler to invade later ...' (25 September 1938, P80/1416 (3)).

'... there has been a great burst of speeches and letters on the

P80/1416

Press demanding that the British should apply the same solution to the Free State Sudetans in the North as they insisted on the Czechs agreeing to. There have been conferences and meetings and manifestos in the North too. There has been criticism of de Valera for not taking the opportunity to come out publicly in the matter – perhaps he did see Chamberlain about that – I believe that if he can't show some results in the matter soon it may affect his popularity in certain quarters. Though I have no doubt that whatever pronouncement he makes will be swallowed as usual' (9 October 1938, P80/1416 (11)).

It was really in the interests of all you believe in to keep the Czech state between Germany and the Balkans, but because the Czechs had an alliance (that failed them) with Russia, you were all 'agin' them, and didn't mind a much greater damage being loosed on Europe. Russia, hateful as she is, is not thinking of swallowing up Europe, only perhaps of her interests in the South West. I cannot understand Catholics who refuse to denounce Hitler because his political theories square more with their ideas than Stalin's, while all the while he is hounding down individual Catholics and persecuting the church and also becoming the greatest danger to Europe since Napoleon, but since I was never able to see why you were so sympathetic to Nazism and Fascism when you were here at home, it is unlikely to be more than ever a mystery to me when I can't get any reasons from you ... I know of course that you will have been as utterly opposed to Hitler's recent actions as anyone, what I can't understand is that you didn't denounce him and his theories when it was obvious that they would lead to this, given the opportunity. Russia seems angelic compared with German brutality at the moment. Personally I hate them both, and am all for the democracy that I have heard you denounce' (14 October 1938, P80/1416 (15)).

'A Captain Cowan, Solicitor, has written a long thing to the Press about the Army and how it must be improved, and in the course of it he criticises your management of it during your time very drastically, your reduction of its size and all that. Of course now no one will remember that at that time people were crying out for economy and nothing more, now they are complaining that the Army isn't bigger and better. He also criticises Frank Aiken. And the keeping on in key positions of all the people appointed in your regime. He seems a disgruntled person himself, you may know him' (26 October 1938, P80/1416 (22)).

'I see that the anti-Jew feeling is being worked up in America as it is everywhere by that vague talk of their power and how they control opinion. One day the Americans may say the same about the Irish there, it is easy to say those things and get them believed. Less than 1% Jews in Germany were credited with running the whole country. People will believe anything when it suits them ... It is all so hopeless and sickening, there is not hope for the human race, I fear, born fools and choosing to be knaves' (29 October 1938, P80/1416 (25)).

13.1.6. General, 1924–45

2 items

Two letters from FitzGerald to Mabel, holidaying with the children in Portrush, County Antrim, mainly concerning the Marquis MacSwiney's dissatisfaction with his position on the list of delegates to the League of Nations. 'The Marquis of course had to come after the two ministers, Att[orney] General, members of Dáil and High Commissioner. Consequently I received a letter yesterday that as he had seen this in the press and the order of names impossible for him to come. To which I replied noting with regret that he couldn't. I expect him round now at any minute as I am sure that it never entered his head that he would be taken literally' (See also P80/556a).

P80/1418 31 May–22 June 1926

20 items

Letters from FitzGerald to Mabel holidaying in Switzerland, The letters dwell largely on his daily routine; his health; Dáil business; the preparation of and response to his Departmental Estimates; and visits to his sons, Pierce in Clongowes, and Fergus and Garret in Bangor. 'But my estimates were finished last night. It is something tho' to get them over ... The Independent has a little leader today calling for the abolition of the Department [of External Affairs]' (4 June 1926, P80/1418 (4)).

'On top of everything else I have been having visits from the Consuls for annotation to my Estimate statements. I have to see the French and Belgian and talk uncivilly to them. I have had to tell the Turf Club and the RDS a few home truths' (11 June 1926, P80/1418 (11)).

P80/1422 March–April 1932

16 items

Letters and cards from FitzGerald holidaying in England in the wake of the 1932 general election to Mabel and his sons. He discusses family matters; describes his visits to the theatre and cinema, and meetings with literary acquaintances; refers to his post-electoral depression and the antics of de Valera and the Fianna Fáil administration.

'The filling up of rooms is typical of Dev. I know you attributed it to prejudice when I said something like that a good while ago. He would always elaborately insist that he had been overpaid a few shillings and then give orders involving thousands for his own service. The yarn that they will be working too late to get out to Blackrock is a bit thin. But the papers are treating him well' (1 April 1932, P80/1422 (4)).

'One is much more conscious of the slump here than in Ireland. Everybody recognises it as a fact, They don't think it is an excuse for Gov[ernmen]t incompetence. I suppose with shops and factories the people see that employers are losing money as well as workers. And no one seems to suggest that it can be solved by just charging more for the same thing ...'.

'I have not been impressed by stories of split in Cabinet. I know that nobody realises how Dev always fails to get a draft to suit him, and goes on from day to day. He wants to say things and not say them at the same time. And of course the people outside don't understand why a man can't say what he thinks. They think the split is in the Cabinet while it is really in the Pres[ident's] mind' (5 April 1932, P80/1422 (7)).

Typescript copy of eleven letters received by Kathleen McKenna, a member of the Publicity Department and private secretary to FitzGerald, 1922–7; from FitzGerald and his wife, 1921–52, and presented by McKenna to Garret FitzGerald in 1980. The earlier letters contain instructions concerning the administration of the Publicity Department and enquiries by Mabel FitzGerald as to her husband's whereabouts. Later material consists largely of family news and references to Mabel FitzGerald's grief at the death of her husband and bitterness concerning his political colleagues' shabby treatment of him. She congratulates McKenna on the accuracy and dignity of her two Radio Éireann broadcasts on The Irish Bulletin and describes the favourable reaction of family and friends. 'One of them said to me that she thought your broadcasts had finally killed the misapprehensions about Desmond's position in connection with the Bulletin. The boys... were thoroughly satisfied, as I was myself, that whatever influence [Robert] Brennan and [Frank] Gallagher had had with their lies, a final verdict came from you ...'.

14.1.2.4 George Bernard Shaw correspondence, 1914-34

P80/1551 28 November 1914

2 copies

Letter from Mabel, Cuan, Ventry, Dingle, County Kerry, to George Bernard Shaw urging him to turn his attention to the campaign against the National Press in Ireland. 'I would like to see you moved by a flash of revelation to shake the dust of England off your feet and to put yourself in touch with all that it most advanced in Nationalism here, to work as Roger Casement is doing to make Ireland a Nation before Europe.' Refers to her opposition to the recruitment of Irishmen to the English army, the speaking of Irish by her son as his native tongue and their residence in an Irish-speaking district; 'of that I know you won't approve but you see I haven't changed a bit since I was with you.'

P80/1552 1 December 1914

2 copies

Letter from Shaw, Ayot St Lawrence, Welwyn, Hertfordshire, to Mabel with details of his belief that Ireland should be on the Republican and democratic side in the war and thus against the Prussian military machine. Refers to his writing to the Irish newspapers with the intention of reducing pro-German propaganda in Ireland and suggesting to the British Government better ways of encouraging recruitment to the English army than the suppression of the Irish Nationalist papers. Mabel's encouragement of her son to speak Irish is decried. 'As an Ulster woman, you must be aware that if you bring your son up to hate anyone except a Papist, you will go to hell.' She is

Desmond and Mabel FitzGerald Papers

P80/1552 requested to continue her correspondence with him should she so wish. 'I can at least assure you that your letters will never be unwelcome.'

P80/1553 7 December 1914

2 copies

Letter from Mabel to Shaw with details of the suppression of the Irish nationalist newspapers, the prosecution and police persecution of known nationalists and belief that any nationalist physical force movement could only succeed with the military assistance of Germany. The activities of Casement are praised. 'We are a nation now before the world and have a new self-respect on that account'. Also notes that the development of democracy would be assisted with the destruction of English capitalism.

P80/1554 12-13 December 1914

2 copies

Letter from Shaw to Mabel expressing his belief that the turning of Ireland against England in the war would end all possibilities of the establishment of Home Rule. Emphasises the need for co-operation with larger countries since the age of small nations was past. 'Ireland is your plaything at present, because you are an educated woman trying to live the life of a peasant'. Shaw expresses his support for a Sinn Féin that wants to provide sound organisation for Ireland in place of the power of the English, but dismisses the organisation should its intentions be to turn Ireland into a 'village community' where only the Irish language is spoken.

P80/1555 [December 1914]

6pp

Letter from Mabel to Shaw assuring him that she will continue to enlighten him on the present situation in Ireland. Reference to sending nationalist newspapers.

P80/1556 27 January 1915

6pp

P80/1556 of her difficult experiences after the expulsion of Desmond from County Kerry with her separation from her husband and children and the need to move house. 'May England be broken by land and by sea; to my national hatred of her is now added a personal one that is no doubt more ignoble but as strong'.

P80/1557 29 January 1915

2 copies

Letter from Shaw, 10 Adelphi Terrace, London, to Mabel with details of his distress at her proclamation as an enemy of England, France and Belgium. Assures her of his sympathy concerning the difficulties endured after the expulsion of Desmond but declares that the Government had no choice but to remove them from their residence on the west coast with all of the possibilities of their signalling to Germany. Refers again to his belief that there is no future for small and poor independent states.

P80/1558 14 June 1915

2 copies

Letter from Shaw to Mabel with brief details of his knowledge of the 'S. S. case' [Francis Sheehy-Skeffington] and his letter written to Hanna Sheehy-Skeffington.

P80/1635 25 February–21 March 1921

23 items

Twenty-three letters and postcards from Desmond, Arbour Hill, to Mabel with details of letters and parcels received and clothes, food and books required. References to prison life, allocation of work and the occupation of time.

P80/1636 22 March–May 1921

9 items

Nine letters and postcards from Desmond, Rath Camp, Curragh, Kildare to Mabel with details of his transfer there. 'It is an improvement on Arbour Hill, except for the matter of visits. But no doubt you will not let it rest at that' (22 March 1921). Details given of books and newspapers received, people to be remembered to and his loneliness. 'I am afraid that you will find me particularly unsympathetic about loneliness. Mention of such a thing to me is like talking to a starving man about the pains of overeating' (3 April 1921).

P80/1637 22 March–28 June 1921

8 items

Letters from General Boyd, Assistant Provost Marshal and the Commandant of the Curragh to Mabel concerning the prohibition of visits to prisoners at the Curragh other than that of a business nature. Includes a letter from Mabel to the Headquarters at the Curragh concerning her one successful visit to see Desmond and her second fruitless journey of many miles accompanied by her sons when permission to visit was refused without any previous warning by the P80/1637 military authorities (25 June 1921).

14.1.4.2 Political situation and correspondence 1921-7

P80/1638 2 March 1921

12pp

Letter from Mabel to Gladys Hynes with details of Desmond's solitary confinement at Arbour Hill. References made to the shooting, ill treatment and mental torture of Irish women by British forces, with details of cases of criminal assault. 'No woman either in the Press or in public boards has asked for a Truce as no Republican woman would take a unworthy Peace.'

P80/1639 4 April 1921

5pp

Letter from Mabel to Hynes detailing her amazement at the behaviour of the English who although kindly enough to live amongst are 'completely lacking in imagination, narrow, pompous and swelled headed.' Refers to the transfer of Desmond from Arbour Hill to the Curragh.

P80/1640 [May 1921]

2pp

Memorandum entitled 'References to Desmond and his appointment as Substitute Director of Propaganda in the minutes of the Proceedings of the Dáil, 1919-21'.

P80/1641 4 June 1921

2pp

Letter from Mabel to Hynes offering assistance should her daughter come to Ireland in search of employment. Refers to the punishment of the prisoners at the Curragh 'because they would not submit to humiliating conditions.'

P80/1642 22–25 August 1921

2pp

Note from Earnán [Ernie O'Malley] to Mabel referring to the willingness of some of 'our side' to compromise and the inevitability that hostilities will be postponed for as long as possible.

P80/1643 15 September–19 October 1921

13pp

Notes to Mabel from Earnán [Ernie O'Malley] and rough details concerning the availability and purchase of books such as Rifle Shooting for War, Manual of Field Engineering and How to Shoot with a Revolver.

P80/1644 24 November 1921

P80/1653 12 February 1924

2pp

Letter from O'Malley to Mabel with references to his reading material, the Greek dramatists and modern French literature. 'This is a kind of glass house existence as though one has ample time to read yet I think I would read three times as much in the same time outside.'

P80/1654 13 September 1926

6pp

Letter from Mabel to Hynes. References to the 'unpopular measures' of the Free State Government and the unfortunate reality that their defeat looks unlikely. Weakening of Republicanism is acknowledged but belief expressed that a compromise such as that sought by those in support of the Treaty, should not be considered after the loss of so many lives. Fears raised concerning the activities of de Valera [foundation of Fianna Fáil] and their indications of another movement towards compromise, 'I am sure de Valera has good motives, but so had the Free Staters when they took the Treaty'. Also contains personal news.

P80/1655 31 May 1927

4pp

Letter from Mabel to Mrs Gavan Duffy with a declaration of her republican stance and values in defence of Duffy's accusations that she financed trips by Desmond as a minister of the Free State Government to the Imperial Conferences. 'If you believed that I said I helped Desmond to go to the Imperial Conference, knowing my Republican principles, you must believe me pretty vile'.

P80/1656 July 1927

2pp

Copy of a letter from Mabel to Mrs O'Higgins offering sympathy concerning the assassination of her husband, [Kevin O'Higgins].

P80/1657 14 July 1927

4pp

2pp

Letter from Mabel to Hynes concerning the dates of her visit to Ireland.

P80/1660 Not dated

5pp

Two narratives written by Mabel, the first entitled 'Account of entering the Post Office on the first day of Easter week', the second giving background details of her life as a child of a middle class Belfast home.

14.1.4.3 General election, 1944, 1950

P80/1661 5 January 1944

2pp

Letter from Desmond to Des Cunningham concerning his defeat as a Fine Gael candidate for County Dublin in the General Election. 'I have always been the very first to condemn others who make a grievance of their personal defeat and of those who, when a principle is at stake, refuse to fight those without a prior assurance of victory. So what have I to complain about?'

P80/1662 8 March 1944

2pp

Letter from William T. Cosgrave to Mabel concerning his retirement as Fine Gael leader and praise of his colleagues, including Desmond, 'to whom is due any success I may have achieved.'

P80/1663 26 April 1944

2 copies

Letter from George Bernard Shaw to Mabel thanking her for remembering him. 'But you wouldn't know me if you met me in the street, I am so horribly old. Eighty eight, just think of it!' Enquires after the FitzGerald family and Desmond's political position. 'Is he now Government or Opposition? Is it possible for anybody to get on with Dev?'

P80/1664 26 May 1944

2 copies

Copy letter from Mabel to Shaw with details of Desmond standing as a Fine Gael candidate and his attitude towards the Fianna Fáil government. 'He is very much Opposition. He could not differ more than he does from the present Government in outlook.' Details her own changing political stance and although never a supporter of the Cumann na nGaedheal Government acknowledges the high standards they maintained. 'Finally the state of Europe convinced me that it was folly to try to stand alone as a separate Republic. And now the last folly of complete isolation may be committed if what is really a dictatorship is consolidated ... It is not possible for anyone to get on with the man you mention [de Valera] except a yes-man.'

P80/1665 25 October 1950

1p

Letter from Rushworth Fogg, Feature Editor, The Irish News Agency, Grafton St, Dublin to Mabel requesting material on Shaw due to his failing health.

14.1.4.4 Death of Desmond and political situation, 1947-51

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Irish Independent containing an obituary of Desmond.

P80/1668 April 1947

1p

Photocopy of a tribute to Desmond in The Sunday Independent by Ernest Blythe.

P80/1669 April 1947

1 item

Unaddressed card from Mabel and the FitzGerald family with thanks for the sympathy offered in their loss.

P80/1670 7 August 1947

2pp

Letter from Mabel, Airfield, Stillorgan Road, Donnybrook, Dublin to Gladys Hynes. Personal news includes details of her move to Donnybrook and a description of her new residence.

P80/1671 17 February 1948

2pp

Letter from Vincent Hogan, University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Indiana [a student], to Mabel recalling his meeting with her the previous year. Details of his research on Ireland and pleasure at the recent election results, defeat of Fianna Fáil and the creation of a coalition government.

P80/1672 9 March 1948

14pp

Letter from Mabel to Hynes concerning the recent defeat of Fianna Fáil. Describes the appointment of John A. Costello as Taoiseach of the coalition government, '... an excellent choice, a man of great integrity and of brains and common-sense'; the predominantly Fine Gael composition of the new government and their intentions to abandon autocratic government. Personal news includes a detailed account of the members of the FitzGerald family and suggestions for hotels for her holiday in Ireland.

P80/1673 5 April 1948

2pp

Letter from Hogan to Mabel referring to articles in The New York Times detailing renewed hope in Ireland with the replacement of de Valera and his Fianna Fáil government.

P80/1674 6 April 1948

1p

Letter from William T. Craddick CSC, Prefect of Religion, University of Notre Dame, to Mabel informing her that Desmond will be remembered on the anniversary of his death by both students and P80/1674 faculty members.

P80/1675 19 May 1948

2pp

Letter from John A. Costello, Department of the Taoiseach, Dublin, to Mabel thanking her for her message of congratulations upon his appointment as Taoiseach. Expresses regret that Desmond did not live to see the overthrow of de Valera and his government.

P80/1676 18 November 1948

1p

Letter from Michael [Kirwan?], Metropolitan District Courthouse, Inns Quay, Dublin, to Mabel requesting an unmounted copy of a particular photograph of Desmond.

P80/1677 15 April 1949

8pp

Letter from Mabel to [Jacques] Maritain, thanking him for his kind words about Desmond published upon his death. Details given of the tributes in the Irish newspapers and their concentration upon his nationalism, few appreciating his stance as a 'good European' or knowledge of Catholic philosophy and Thomism. References to her own conversion to Catholicism and her personal faith.

P80/1678 9 September 1951

1p

Letter from Pádraic Colum, Ranelagh, to Mabel thanking her for sending certain papers of Desmond's to him and referring to their talk together. 'I shall never forget your description of the empty street in front of the Post Office as Pearse read his proclamation.'

P80/1679 15 November 1951

2pp

Letter from Hogan, Seattle, Washington, to Mabel detailing his disappointment concerning the defeat of the coalition government. 'I certainly hope that the gains made by the Coalition Government are not lost by the de Valera group. Maybe if a sharp issue arises and de Valera loses the Independent votes, his government will topple.' Details the centennial celebrations in the city of Seattle and the beginnings of the 1952 Presidential election campaign.

14.1.4.5 Political events and figures: commemoration, 1950–85

P80/1680 18 January 1950

3 copies

Letter from Robert Brennan, Dublin, (Director of Broadcasting, Radio Éireann, 1947–48) to Kathleen McKenna, Viterbo, Italy (member of the Publicity Department and private secretary to Desmond, 1922–27), encouraging her to document the history and activities of The Irish Bulletin and its staff. Corrected and annotated photocopies of the letter.

P80/1681 22 January 1950

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Sunday Times containing an extract from Allegiance, the memoirs of Robert Brennan. Article entitled 'Hunger-strike' with details of his imprisonment after the Easter Rising and the political situation.

P80/1682 16 April 1950

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Sunday Times containing an extract from Allegiance. Article details the activities of Brennan and political situation as the story approaches 'the grim days of the Black-and-Tans terror.'

P80/1683 8 July 1950

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Sunday Press containing an article by David Hogan entitled 'New Leader Challenges the Old—and Wins. A Party Vanishes After 40 Years'. Details the sweeping victory enjoyed by Sinn Féin in the 1918 election.

P80/1684 5 August 1951

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Sunday Press containing an article by Hogan with details of the success enjoyed by the Republican courts between 1919 and 1920.

P80/1685 12 August 1951

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Sunday Press containing an article by Hogan entitled 'Secret Newspaper. The Story of The Irish Bulletin!' Details its publication as an underground newsheet throughout almost the entire length of the War of Independence.

P80/1686 14 August 1951

4pp

Letter from MacKenna, Dublin, to the Editor, The Sunday Press, with reference to an article by Hogan in the newspaper entitled 'Secret newspaper', containing an account of the work of the Irish Bulletin. The absence of any mention of the contribution of Desmond, Director of Propaganda for Dáil Éireann and Editor of The Irish Bulletin is questioned. Includes a lightly altered version of the same letter, heavily corrected (17 August 1951).

P80/1687 18 August [1951]

1p

Pencil letter from M. Feehan, Editor, The Sunday Press to MacKenna declaring that Hogan refers in great detail to The Irish Bulletin in subsequent articles to be published in due course.

P80/1688 August 1951

42pp

Three typed drafts of an article entitled 'The Irish Bulletin Part One', one annotated 'copy for Mrs FitzGerald', one heavily corrected. Typed draft article entitled 'The Irish Bulletin Part Two'. All drafts compiled by MacKenna. Number of isolated pages.

P80/1689 16 September 1951

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Sunday Press containing an article by Hogan entitled 'Caught in Grave Truce Breach'. Details of events culminating in the Truce, 11 July 1921, Treaty negotiations and activities of The Irish Bulletin throughout.

P80/1690 14 December 1951

1p

Letter from Mervyn Wall, General Features Officer, Radio Éireann, to Dr Richard Hayes, Kill O' the Grange, County Dublin, with details of the broadcasting times of two talks by McKenna entitled 'The Irish Bulletin'.

P80/1691 14 February 1953

9pp

Letter from Mabel to Gladys Hynes concerning her reservations about the writing of a memoir on Desmond by the American writer Ezra Pound. Believes it unlikely that an American would possess a sufficiently detailed knowledge of Irish history, tradition, the Catholic faith, the Easter Rising, and Desmond himself. 'I have met sensitive Americans, but most of them think of our men as they think of Chicago gunmen'. Reference to her own suggestion that the colleagues and friends of Desmond, including Hynes, should each contribute their own piece on their experiences and relationship with Desmond. Request to inform Pound 'gently' of her stance without causing offence.

P80/1692 7 February–13 March 1955

17pp

Correspondence between Mabel and Hynes concerning refusal by Mabel to provide relevant material to a young student instructed by Pound to write a memoir on Desmond. A request from Hynes to participate with the project is rejected in order to save the memory of Desmond from becoming 'an American schoolgirls "exercise"!'. The loyalty of Pound to his old friendship with Desmond is acknowledged by Mabel but she believes that the anti-Catholic stance of Pound would prevent an accurate compilation of the memoirs of a Catholic man. 'His Catholicism was always the strongest thing about him, the permanent thing'.

P80/1693 19–29 May 1957

13pp

Correspondence between Mabel and Hynes concerning the latter's decision to write about her friendship with Desmond and need of background material on the period. The lack of reliable sources is lamented by Mabel. 'The men who founded the State were too overworked to write about it while doing it, and when their work was messed up by the others coming in to power, were too tired and disheartened by the results of their efforts being decried by a lying propaganda against them to write anything'. A work written by a 'fan' of de Valera is dismissed as 'full of untruths'. Reference is made to Mabel's own changing political stance in 1932. 'I had been on their side [de Valera's] because of the principle of Republicanism, though all the men I admired were on the other side but I was gradually sickened with a lying propaganda against better men—seeing also that in the then state of Europe, Ireland could not stand alone. I have taken less and less interest since'. Reference is made to inaccuracies in articles in The Sunday Press by two of Desmond's assistants on The Irish Bulletin, Robert Brennan and Frank Gallagher (published under the pseudonym David Hogan) as examples of 'how strong liars became'.

P80/1694 31 May–16 August 1957

16pp

Correspondence between Mabel and Hynes. Background material acquired by Hynes includes a book by Gallagher. Further references made to Brennan and his claiming to have held Desmond's posts as Editor of The Irish Bulletin, despite statements to the contrary in the volumes of Dáil debates for 1919–21. Refers to the decision by Patricia Hutchins, author of a book on James Joyce, to compile a work on Pound.

P80/1695 25–27 December 1979

1 item

Newspaper cutting from The Irish Times containing an article entitled 'A battle of wits for publicity', an extract from the autobiography of MacKenna and her account of the activities of The Irish Bulletin.

P80/1696 26 September 1985

2pp

Letter from Sheelah Hynes (sister of Gladys Hynes) to Garret FitzGerald concerning her sending the correspondence between Mabel and Gladys to him. Enquiries concerning the first meeting between Desmond and Gladys are addressed and the relationship between Desmond and Pound mentioned.
