
[Test] UCD School of Geography Newsletter - March 2021 - Vol 4 Issue 4

UCD School of Geography <geography@ucd.ie>
 Reply-To: us2-4cfe819267-5ac2e6a1d5@inbound.mailchimp.com
 To: geography@ucd.ie

15 June 2021 at 11:25

View this email in your browser

Welcome to the March 2021 Newsletter

Vol 4 Issue 4

03/02/2021

News and Events

Prof Bradley Garrett made an appearance on the popular 99% Invisible podcast in which he explored the rapidly growing movement of ordinary citizens “prepping” for social and environmental collapse. The episode titled 'The Doom Boom' is available on most platforms and also here.

The Laura Bassi Scholarship, which aims to provide editorial assistance to postgraduates and junior academics whose research focuses on neglected topics of study, is now open to every discipline. More details can be found here.

The RPS group have a job opportunity for a GIS graduate in Cork, Dublin or Galway. For information and to apply for the roles, see their website here.

Thanks to everyone for their contributions to the Graduate Open Day this year which was held on the 16th of February. All the presentation and documents will be available for the next three months via the Vfairs platform for anyone interested.

Thank you to the UCD Geography Society who hosted a Postgraduate Alumni panel on February 23rd. It featured recent graduates from our programmes who have pursued a range of career pathways, including government, industry, NGO/non-profits, & academic research. It was a fantastic event for current students and staff alike, and it was lovely to see our Alumni doing so well.

Featured Academic

Prof Arlene Crampsie reflects on an invitation to speak about culture and heritage at the Leinster Regional Session of the European Youth Parliament. She considers the role of cultural heritage in commemoration and the need to critically engage with questions of what gets remembered and protected and what is silenced and erased. Read more here.

Featured Postdoc

This month's postgraduate contribution is from Postdoctoral Research Fellow Carla Kayanan. She discusses how the contemporary spatial organisation of work influences regional planning policy and contributes to the city's privatisation. Read more here.

Research Seminars

Once again, we are fortunate to have two research seminars coming up this month!

The first, on the 4th of March, features Dr David Meredith from Teagasc. His seminar is titled 'Rural shrinkage: New wine in old bottles?'

The second, on the 25th of March, Assoc Prof Louise Slater from Oxford University will join us. Her seminar title is 'Flood Nonstationarity: detecting, attributing and forecasting changes in hydroclimatic extremes'.

Read more about each seminar, presenter, and access the Zoom link here.

Publications

Prof Federico Ferretti's paper on 'Other radical geographies: tropicity and decolonisation in twentieth-century French geography' was published in the Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers journal. It is available to read here.

The Irish Times published an opinion piece by Prof Niamh Moore Cherry and her colleague from the School of Education, Prof Deirdre McGillicuddy. It is titled 'Divisive commentary over reopening schools devalues teachers' work' and is available to read here.

15/06/2021

University College Dublin Mail - [Test] UCD School of Geography Newsletter - March 2021 - Vol 4 Issue 4

This email was sent to geography@ucd.ie

why did I get this? unsubscribe from this list update subscription preferences

UCD School of Geography · UCD School of Geography, Newman Building · University College Dublin Belfield, · Dublin, Leinster
D04 · Ireland

Grow your business with  mailchimp