I wanted to study at a world-class international business school and this is the reason I chose the Quinn School of Business in Ireland. Highlights included the experience of working on a consultation project for the Proudly Made in Africa initiative, working with students from around the world on NICE, an intercultural enterprise programme for entrepreneurship and taking part in a summer school programme in the BI Norwegian Business School, Oslo.

BSc Business

I chose to study BSc Business at UCD because this programme offered the best of both worlds: combining business education and travelling, which was everything I sought in a university degree. Studying at UCD has been eye-opening and inspiring. This programme has given me a global perspective of the business world and its inner functions. The wide variety of multinational corporations located in Ireland is a key factor for studying in Dublin as they offer graduates endless opportunities.
