MSc in Project Management

Why is this course for me?

The MSc in Project Management programme is aimed at graduates with a background in business, economics, engineering, science or computer science who have an interest in developing their project management skills.

What is the programme about?

Project management is a key professional skill for delivering successful projects in areas such as business change, new products, new facilities, new systems and new technology. Projects are the way in which most organisations now organise and implement the constant changes required to operate in competitive and pressurised markets.

The material and approach in the MSc in Project Management incorporates world-wide best practices from two professional bodies: the United States Project Management Institute (PMI) Body of Knowledge and the UK PRINCE2 sets of standards.

UCD College of Business and Law

UCD Michael Smurfit Graduate Business School is one of an elite group of schools worldwide to achieve the Triple Crown of Accreditation from EQUIS, AACSB and AMBA and we are the only Irish member of CEMS, which is a global alliance of leading business schools and organisations. Accreditations are your guarantee that you will receive a top quality, world class MBA and they position our school, and more importantly our students, in the minds of the international business community.

A Financial Times survey ranked UCD Smurfit School as the leading business school in Ireland and 14th in Europe. The School's academics hold the highest qualifications from the world's leading universities and this together with their business experience enables them to create a stimulating environment both in teaching and research.

What will I study?

Our aim is to prepare you for a successful career in project management. We will give you an in-depth education in the basics of managing change, develop your skills and teach you how to apply creative and innovative approaches to problem-solving.

What will I learn?

You will develop the practical skills to plan, organise and control business projects and get a solid foundation in the theory and best practise or project management. The programme uses extensive group learning and skills development, so as well as individual reports and examinations you will work within assigned study groups and produce group presentation and case analyses.

How will I benefit?

The skills and hands-on experience you get on the programme will enable you to hit the ground running in your project management career. You will learn how to communicate with clients and understand the organisational and human issues involved in managing projects.

“The year at UCD Smurfit School has been my most enjoyable at third level, hands down. Working in teams, with new friends and from different undergrad backgrounds really made the year fly by. The course is extremely interesting, with a good mix of assignments and exams.”
